MR. BRYAN proposes "to put the Bible into the Constitution," if he loses his fight to uphold the anti-monkey law in Tennessee. What has the Bible to do with the monkey law or the Constitution? Has Mr. Bryan forgotten these lines:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press."

Mr. Bryan would have to take that out of the Constitution to make room for Jonah and the whale, as part of the law of the land.

TO PUT INTO the Constitution, the Bible, the Koran, the Talmud, Mrs. Eddy's "Science and Health," or Maimonides' "Guide to the Perplexed," was not the original American idea.

The Constitution, establishing rules for men on earth, is one thing. A sacred book, expressing views of certain people on religions, is another thing.

THOMAS JEFFERSON wrote the Declaration of Independence and signed it, and Mr. Bryan often quotes him with approval. Jefferson, as Secretary of State writing to a Mohammedan ruler, told him he need have no hesitation about dealing with the United States, because this nation, officially, had no religion.

And that message of Jefferson was used in recent times in negotiations between his government and the Sultan of Sulu.

BRYAN, who is a good threatener, also threatens to bar the teaching of evolution throughout the entire nation, a sort of scientific prohibition, and Mr. Bryan may run for Presi-

VANDERBILT HEIRESS SPURNS A PRINCE

Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt, 2d, who has spurned Rumanian prince for the hand and heart of a Yankee. Society expects her engagement to Earl Smith, ex-Yale athletic star, will soon be announced. Young Smith was her childhood sweetheart. Queen Marie of Rumania had long hoped that the fair and wealthy Consuelo would look with favor on her royal son. (Photo by International News Reel.)

Newport, R. I., July 10.—Consuelo Vanderbilt, younger daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt, 2d, whose engagement announcement to Earl Smith, Yale graduate and athlete, has just been announced, spurned Europe's royalty to marry a "red blooded American."

This became known here today with the arrival of Consuelo's sister, Murial, who is also to go to the altar within a few weeks with Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., Boston insurance broker, as her selected mate.

The younger sister was sought after by no less a personage than Prince Carol of Rumania, son of the

THUGS FLEE AMID HAIL OF BULLETS IN CAMBRIDGE

Thugs held up a money car of the American Trust Company of Boston today in Albany street, Cambridge, slugged the driver while the messenger was absent, and drove away with the machine and the treasure it contained.

Estimates of the money they obtained by their brazen coup ranged from $30,000 to $40,000.

In leaving, the robbers fired half a dozen shots to intimidate a score of on-lookers and fired point-blank twice at an old man who showed a disposition to try to follow them.

There were three of the thugs in on the jobs, as nearly as the police can figure, after sifting the conflicting stories of excited witnesses.

The robbery was staged in front of the plant of the Neapolitan Ice Cream Company in Albany street.

The messenger had gone upstairs

Ape Trial Judge Asks Divine Aid

DARROW SEEKS DELAY IN CASE AND BRYAN IS SILENT IN FIRST TILT

Court House, Dayton, Tenn., July 10 (I.N.S.).—The long awaited opening of the historical trial of John T. Scopes on charges of violating Tennessee's anti-evolution law gave little spectacular action in the initial clash between the forces of scientific modernism and religious fundamentals as Judge Raulston opened court with a fervent plea for divine guidance in his conduct of the case.

While the eyes of the world centred on this little mountain town and great crowds converged on the court house from far and wide, the first day was spent in legal fencing. Counsel for the defence interposed a motion as soon as court convened demanding the indictment of Scopes be quashed on constitutional grounds.

They alleged the court lacked jur-

CARMEN APPEAL TO FULLER

With all danger of the threatened strike of 7,000 trolley conductors and motormen apparently removed by the attitude of Governor Fuller, expressed in his public statement officials of the carmen's union are today seeking a conference with the Governor, that their interests may be fully protected.

The Governor in his statement announced that both employes and officials of the Boston Elevated were public servants and that a strike would inflict a grave injury and injustice on the more than a million trolley patrons.

LOTTA GAVE HER 'CHILD' $5,000

A present of $5,000 was given her by Lotta M. Crabtree following a Pacific Coast trip, Mrs. Ida M. Blankenburg of Tulsa, Okla., who is attempting to prove herself the daughter of the actress, testified today in Suffolk Probate Court.

The gift was to do with as she pleased, the "daughter" said, and was given her by her "mother," in Chicago.

Under questioning by J. Weston Allen, former Attorney General of Massachusetts and her senior counsel, Mrs. Blankenburg declared that the Pacific trip was during June, July and August of 1905.

On the trip were Lotta, Arthur L. Hardin, a Chicago real estate

Coolidge Nearly Loses His New Pair of Socks

Swampscott, July 10 (I.N.S.)—President Coolidge is going to have a new pair of socks. Mrs. Coolidge is knitting them for him. They will be a mixture of blue and grey.

He almost lost them when Mrs. Coolidge dropped a ball of yarn into the water when she boarded the Mayflower.

Everett Sanders, secretary to the President, saved the day, however. Springing precariously from the base of the gangplank, he shoved his arm into the water up the elbow and rescued the half-finished hose.

ELOPING PAIR FOUND IN CAR

Sought far and wide since July 2, when she ran away with him, Myles Madison and Mary Elizabeth White of Winthrop were taken into custody today fifteen miles outside of Syracuse, N. Y.

They were found huddled together in a stalled car by State troopers of the Lake Oneida district.

The automobile, according to Syracuse police, is the property of Captain L. C. White, of No. 8 Edgehill road, Winthrop, who is a regular army captain, assigned to the East Boston airport.

The first of these big shows will be conducted on Lafayette Mall, Boston Common, opposite West street, next Tuesday noon by the entire "Rose Marie" company, now playing in the season's musical hit at the Shubert Theatre. Proceeds of this open-air performance will be divided equally for both families.

8 ENGINEERS CONFER ON PICKWICK REPORT

The eight engineers who have been inspecting the Pickwick Club ruins met in District Attorney O'Brien's office today for their final conference, and the last step was taken before submission of their grim reports to the Grand Jury.

In the group were four engineers retained by the District Attorney, two Institute of Technology engineers investigating for Mayor Curley and two engineers employed by the Rosenthal estate.

The engineers' reports were the last fragment awaited by the Grand Jury at the end of its investigation of the horror, reached at a time when suits totalling $2,500,000 in damages in connection with the fatal collapse were anticipated.

A small army of lawyers, who specialize in this kind of lawsuits, has already been engaged by the relatives of those who perished in the collapse of the building. Those who were injured and are either in the City Hospital or recovering at their homes, have also engaged legal talent and this array of legal talent is only awaiting action of the Suffolk

WALTHAM BOY DROWNED IN CHARLES RIVER

Twelve-year-old Arthur Featta of No. 23 Hartwell street, Waltham, was drowned today in the Charles River while bathing with boy companions at Sandy Hook Beach. The boy was wading when he stepped into a deep hole and disappeared. Frightened, his companions raced up to Joseph Donnelly of Waltham, who was passing, and told him what had happened. Donnelly dove repeatedly to find the boy, but was unsuccessful. Later Donnelly, with Metropolitan Park policemen and grappling irons, recovered the body.

JAIL DREXEL BIDDLE AS DRUNK; CAR HITS 2

Newport, R. I., July 10.—After spending the early morning hours in a police station cell, George Drexel Biddle, younger son of the Craig Biddles of Philadelphia and Newport society, was arraigned today in the police court, charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Unable to provide $2,500 bail, Biddle was taken back to a cell and later transferred to the county jail. He pleaded not guilty.

As a result of Biddle's driving, according to the police, Miss Mary Colonin of Pawtucket and Morton A. Weaver of Newport are at Newport Hospital, cut, bruised and shaken up.

GIRL SERIOUSLY HURT.

The couple were driving in Bellevue avenue, the authorities say, when Biddle's sedan crashed into jurisdiction to try the case, that the indictment was based on an unconstitutional law.

DAYTON, IN FESTIVE MOOD, WELCOMES APE TRIAL LIKE CIRCUS

The arguments attempting to establish these claims were brief. The defense had little hope of having the motion granted, but it intended to "keep the record straight" for its future fights in the higher courts of the land.

The prosecution fought the move bitterly and their attorneys took much time to debate it. William Jennings Bryan, the high light of the prosecution, did not participate in preliminaries.

Immediately after the judge's decision, unless he should take the matter under advisement, Clarence Darrow, ranking defence counsel, will move for an adjournment until Monday on the ground that the defence requires more time to prepare their case. Such delays are uncommon here, and the motion may be denied, in which event the selection of a jury will be started.

This procedure will be slow and laborious and there is little expectation of a completed panel before Monday. It was announced today that the jurors would not be confined during the trial, except after all the evidence is completed and they retire to prepare a verdict.

NOTABLE CATHOLICS THERE.

Colonel Patrick Henry Callahan, prominent Catholic layman, and Benedict Elder, secretary of the Catholic Press Association of Louisville, Ky., were visitors at the trial. Callahan said the Catholic Church has taken no sides. In its schools it teaches science freely.

It has always been maintained by Catholic scientists, however, that the Darwinian theory of evolution is not substantiated by sufficient evidence to be accepted into the regular curriculum.

Dayton donned festive dress as it might were a circus to come to town, while the eyes of the whole world focused in this direction.

The first bootlegger was captured in Main street with a gallon of mountain corn whiskey hidden in his car. The contraband supply stood in the car for hours before a curious Federal agent came along, seated himself on the running board to rest, and found it.

Judge Raulston was asked how long he thought the trial will last. He replied:

"That depends upon the issues raised. I cannot foretell them or comment upon them. But the length of the trial will depend upon which of three courses the two sides take.

"If young Mr. Scopes decides merely to plead not guilty to the violation of the Tennessee statute under which he is indicted, in that he did not 'teach' evolution, it will be relatively simple.

OPENS BIG ISSUE.

"If he decides to plead that he taught evolution, but that the law is beyond the powers of the Legislature as defined by the Constitutions of Tennessee and the United States, that will bring in a wider issue.

"And, of course, if he decides to show that what he taught is not in contravention to the Bible, that opens the record to almost the entire field of human learning and belief."

Those who heard Judge Raulston say this believe he is not averse to all three issues being raised. Big-shouldered, big-headed, long-jawed and charmingly loquacious, the judge believed with good reason that he is presiding at a trial as important as any since the trial that ushered in the Christian religion.

He issued a formal statement showing it. It read:

"I approach my duties in the trial of the Scopes case with a deep consciousness that the issues are profound.

"I am concerned that those connected with this investigation shall divest themselves of all ambition to establish any particular theory for personal gratification and that we all constantly inquire for the eternal truth.

"If man, without inspiration, attempts to delve into the mysteries of God, he finds himself overwhelmed with perplexities.

BRYAN'S SON ARRIVES.

"Therefore, I am much interested that the unerring hand of Him who is the author of All Truth and Justice, shall direct every official act of mine."

The defense attorneys were at first a bit taken aback by this. Then they realized that it was merely the honest prayer of a sincere man. They gave it a hearty "Amen."

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., has arrived to help his father. A. T. Stewart, technical head of the prosecution, also is here. So are Clarence Darrow and Dudley Field Malone.

Final conferences on both sides lasted long. Even when they were over both sides were chary of discussing the final plans that must have been framed.

Thirteen lawyers, eight for the prosecution and five for the defense, were in Dayton, ready for the trial.

The law Scopes is charged with violating prohibits the teaching of evolution theory in all universities, normals and all other public schools of Tennessee which are supported in whole or in part by the public school funds of the State.

The prosecution array of counsel consists of five Tennessee and two visiting attorneys. Lawyers from the Volunteer State are Attorney-General A. T. Stewart, S. K. Hicks, H. E. Hicks, B. G. McKenzie, J. G. McKenzie and Wallace C. Haggard. The visitors are William Jennings Bryan and William Jennings Bryan, Jr.

W. J. Bryan's Son Most Silent of Men

Dayton, Tenn., July 10 (I.N.S.)—The son of the most famous talker in America is the most silent of men.

William Jennings Bryan, Jr., here to help his dad, sat in the smoker of a Pullman from Chattanooga to Dayton, listening to newspapermen discussing the evolution trial and Bryan—and was unknown to them until, at the depot, the elder Bryan embraced the handsome young stranger and cried:

"Hello Willie—God bless you."

Young Bryan is a Los Angeles lawyer, father of three daughters. He is a sportsman, hunter and fisherman. He is thirty-eight years old, a six-footer, dresses in extremely smart taste and, except for his diffidence, might pass for a movie hero.

British Bishop Says God Used Evolution to Create Man

London, July 10 (A.P.).—Some of England's most noted divines and scientists condemn the Tennessee law forbidding the teaching of evolution, in a symposium published by the Weekly Nature. These views were assembled by the weekly because the trial at Dayton, Tenn., of John T. Scopes is attracting almost as much interest in England as in the United States.

Some of the opinions quoted say the Tennessee law is the result of "ignorant fanaticism," that it is a "mediaeval gesture," and a "curiosity in the history of civilization."

The bishop of Birmingham is quoted by Nature as saying: "As one who values intellectual freedom, I am shocked that Anglo-Saxon communities should seek by legislation and prosecution to prevent the spread of knowledge.

"As a Christian, I am dismayed by a movement which opposes a reasonable formulation of the Christian faith. The normal, educated Christian Briton regards the process of evolution as the machinery whereby God created man. Every divine of every eminence among us accepts this point of view."

PRINCE FAILS TO WIN MISS VANDERBILT

beautiful Queen Marie of Rumania. It is said that the Queen, who is probably more popular in the United States than any of the reigning monarchs of Europe, herself planned the match.

It is said that the Queen first gave a photograph of Miss Consuelo to Prince Carol. Then came the formal introduction, but no sooner had the introductory ceremonies been concluded than Miss Vanderbilt excused herself to run away and dance with young Smith, whose marriage to the young heiress is scheduled for July 25.

Earl Smith is twenty-four, a graduate of Yale, and has known Consuelo from childhood days. He has been an all-round athlete and a very popular member of society's young eligibles. He is connected with a Wall Street banking firm.

The engagement, revealed today, did not surprise intimate friends of the couple. Tea-talk among the younger set has linked their names for several years. At Newport, where the families of both are prominent, Consuelo and Earl have long been inseparable companions.

Last Summer they were the principals in a near-tragic adventure there. Leaving Baileys Beach one afternoon, with Consuelo's sister, Muriel, and Tommy Tailer, son of the T. Suffern Tailers, in a small canoe, they were caught in a heavy storm and carried out to sea. For four hours, lost in a dense fog, they drifted helplessly far off the coast before they were rescued by coast guards.

Miss Murel Vanderbilt and her fiance, Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., have arrived at "Beech Mound" at the end of Bellevue avenue, facing Bailey's Beach, where they are to be married July 25 by Cardinal Hayes, head of the Catholic diocese of New York. Miss Vanderbilt said that her mother and sister, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, 2d, and Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, who arrived in New York on the Olympic, will hurry on to Newport today. Miss Vanderbilt and Mr. Church motored up the avenue in a lively fashion to the Casino, where they registered and took a look around, and later went to the Newport Country Club, where they also registered. The bride-elect declared that "all the wedding plans are being made by "mother," and that the ceremony would take place at "Beech Mound." Miss Muriel Vanderbilt came from California to meet her mother, and the three are to be at "Beech Mound" before the end of the week. Miss Vanderbilt also said "mother knows more about my wedding outfit than I do."

throp High School, is fifteen years old. Madison, who lives on Sunnyside avenue, Winthrop, is twenty.

There is a warrant out here, charging the boy with abduction, as the girl is a minor and even her willingness to be taken off by her Lochinvar does not make it legal.

Dispatches from Syracuse were incomplete. They did not say whether the youthful elopers had been married.

Since their flight, it is understood, they have been "touring," occasionally stopping to give the boy a chance to wire friends for money.

Both were wet and bedraggled and discouraged when the troopers looked in on them and recognized the boy.

Captain White, in appealing to the police, was at first unwilling to make complaint against young Madison. He said his daughter had given no indication of a schoolgirl infatuation and had not been warned against the boy.

An inventory of her wardrobe the day she was discovered missing showed that she had arisen in haste to join a suitor outside and neglected to put on a dress.

Humanity Family Tree Is Shaken at Dayton

DAYTON, Tenn., July 10 (A.P.).—Dudley Field Malone, New York lawyer and a member of the defence counsel, stood chatting with a friend in Main street. A huge man in blue overalls and "railroader's" cap stepped up and asked him:

"Your name Malone?"

"Yes, sir," the New Yorker replied.

"So's mine," said the worker, and offered his hand.

The lawyer returned the vigorous clasp and asked about his lineage.

"There were about twenty Malones came over from Ireland," said the Tennesseean. "I guess we were all kin."

"Well, I hope you're not going to deny the relationship now," Dudley laughed as they parted.

CLARENCE DARROW.

Clarence Darrow received an invitation to attend the Sunday school class which William Jennings Bryan will teach next Sunday. The Chicago lawyer thanked the preacher who asked him to attend, but declined the invitation.

"I'll probably be busy about that time," Darrow said.

The courtroom seats about 800 persons. Court attendants planned to accommodate perhaps 200 other spectators by filling corridors and door spaces with chairs and benches.

Dayton was filled with visitors, but not excessively crowded, as the trial started. Rooms in hotels and homes were occupied, although accommodations were still to be obtained from the local committee of reception. The Rhea County Jail alone was empty, Jailer Bruce Harris having said goodbye to the last of several mountaineer moonshiners who have occupied cells in the ancient building.

The old-fashioned up-and-down pump at the corner of the courthouse yielded today to the modern push-button drinking fountains, four of which were installed on the courthouse lawn.

to get a deposit and also to deliver part of a payroll.

DRIVER IS BEATEN UP.

In his absence, the thugs came out of the alley and fell upon the driver, who was unprepared for trouble.

He was beaten into insensibility and tossed out. Then the men, without attempting to count the money, drove off with the car.

Inquiry at the headquarters of the American Trust Company brought forth the information that the car was being used for collections, as well as for delivering payrolls.

There was at least $4,000 or $5,000 of payroll money when the thugs came slinking up behind the driver and overpowered him.

"But some collections must have been made during the morning," explained a cashier. "The loss may be far greater than $5,000." From other sources, it was learned it might run between $30,000 and $40,000. Bank officials are checking up.

A general alarm was sent out as soon as the spectators recovered their nerve, and a general search is in progress.

The man fired upon was Jesse Dale of No. 237 Brookline street, Cambridge. He wanted to try to stop the getaway.

Other shots broke the windshields of automobiles parked nearby, as the thugs fired at random to impress it upon the witnesses that they were tough and meant to shoot to kill if need be.

BOSTON BANISHED MAN IN CASE LIKE SCOPES

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—The age-old effort to define truth will be revived at the trial of Professor John T. Scopes, Tennessee evolutionist.

His indictment for teaching the Darwinian theory in public schools contrary to the statute, has precedents which reach back for centuries. In America they date virtually from Plymouth Rock; in the world at large, from the dawn of the Christian era.

The now nationally known "Scopes case" is recognizably akin to prevailing differences between modernists and fundamentalists, which have increased with the rise of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick.

The last actual trial occurred in Cleveland, O., in May, 1924, when William Montgomery Brown, former Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Arkansas, was pronounced guilty by a church court of holding beliefs at odds with the accepted doctrine of his denomination. He publicly avowed communism and so-called atheism.

In the '90's, Professor Charles A. Briggs, Presbyterian seminarian of New York city, was charged with having expressed himself at variance with the Westminster Confession. The New York Presbytery cleared him, but the General Assembly of the church reversed the decision and pronounced a verdict of suspension.

Dr. Richard Heber Newton, a New York Episcopalian, of the same period, cut short charges against his "broad churchmanship" by demanding a formal trial. His demand was met, but the plaintiffs failed to appear.

David Swing of Chicago left the Presbyterian faith to preach independently in the '70's, when those citing him for alleged heresy, refused to abide by his acquittal at the hands of the Chicago Presbytery and threatened to appeal to the Synod.

Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper, Sunday school worker was haled before the Presbyterian authorities in San Francisco about 1870.

Theologians who survive heresy proceedings and gained what was reported as a firmer position, were Horace Bushnell, Congregationalist, of Hartford, Conn., in 1849; Prof. Philip Schaaf, whose acquittal in the German Reformed Church in 1845 was echoed for thirty-five years in the "Mercersburg controversy;" Lyman Beecher, father of Henry Ward Beecher and Presbyterian pastor in Cincinnati, in 1835; and Rev. Albert Barnes, Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, 1837.

The witchcraft delusion in Salem was the tragic climax of controversialism in Colonial days, when nineteen were hanged and one "pressed to death" in 1692.

Henry Dunster was forced to resign as the first president of Harvard College in 1654, after he publicly doubted validity of infant baptism. He was also indicted by a grand jury as a heretic and sentenced to "a public admonition" and placed under bond for good behavior.

Samuel Gorton, religionist, about 1640 was virtually deported to England because of the unpopularity of his temperament and views. He returned to America under letter of safe conduct issued by the Earl of Warwick to the Massachusetts magistrates. Gorton's trouble began in Plymouth Colony when he came to the defense of his wife's servant, who had smiled in church. He suffered successive banishments from Plymouth Colony when he came to and Boston. A sect which adopted his belief survived him one hundred years, records show.

Explorer Returns From Expedition Into Wilds of Amazon River

Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, world famous Harvard explorer who for a year battled untold hardships to reach the headwaters of the Orinoco River by way of the Amazon River in Brazil, is due back in New York today, with stories of daring that will equal those of Livingston and Stanley.

Monkey and tapir meat, wild pig and large lizards as the only means of substinence, are only a small part of the story Dr. Rice will report of his hardships, according to Captain A. W. Stevens of the United States Army Air Service, who preceded the party to this country on account of his superior methods of locomotion.

HAVE THRILLING TALE.

Dr. Rice and his wife, who met him in a European port to accompany him to this country, are expected to unfold a tale of unknown lands and tropical perils that rival the wildest works of fiction.

As fascinating as the wanderings of Ulysses is the tale of the strange contrasts brought back by Captain Stevens. His account of scientists using such modern inventions as the airplane to conquer the wilds, yet being forced to revert to the most primitive methods of self-preservation, was released by the War Department on his arrival 24 hours before his chief.

Stevens vouched for the succulence of monkey meat and wild pig, but said he drew the line at lizards though the Indians seem to eat them with relish.

FEVER HITS HIM.

The natives wear long rods in their ears and had difficulty in adjusting the ear phones when invited to try civilization's latest means of communication.

According to Dr. Charles C. Bull, geologist of the expedition, who has already arrived in New York, the expedition managed to get within seventy-five miles of its objective, but a capsizing canoe, in which the party was making a perilous headway, forced them to return to civilization.

As Dr. Bull recounted the achievements of the expedition before the Harvard Club in New York, he was attacked by abrupt recurrence of tropical fever and ague, from which he suffered on the Amazon. "You can never shake off the tropics," he declared, smiling grimly. Though confined to his bed, Dr. Bull told of the exploration.

"The Indians of northern Brazil believe that those who come from 'the land of the rising sun' are friends, while those from the west they regard as enemies," he said. "So, instead of ascending the Negro River, and being shot at with poisoned arrows, as happened two years ago, Dr. Rice this time selected the easterly route along the River Branco.

"All along the way we were treated with perfect courtesy. Many different tribes of Indians were encountered. Careful study of psysalognomics showed them to be identi-Africa."

Police said that whether it was a case of murder or suicide would depend largely upon whether a revolver found in the car was of the kind used by the Long Branch officers.

Walling was 28 years old and a son of Chief of Police William D. Walling, of Long Branch. He was married and had one child.

Miss Linzmayer was 22 years old and was graduated last Spring from the Nurses' Training School of Monmouth Memorial Hospital.

COOLIDGE BOY WILL VISIT DAD

President's Son Will Spend Few Days a White Court and Then Go to Devens

By BERT FORD.

Swampscott, July 10.—John Coolidge is expected to arrive at White Court soon. He will spend a few days with his parents before starting his tour at the Citizen's Training Camp at Camp Devens. John has been spending his vacation with Colonel Coolidge at the old homestead in Plymouth, Vt.

He has been getting into shape for his military course. Ie is tanned and has filled out, according to latest reports. Mrs. Coolidge said she expected her son very soon in a conversation on the Mayflower on Thursday.

Colonel Coolidge is showing marked improvement every day. Iis condition is such that it is thought it will not be necessary to subject him to a second operation.

"Dick" Jervis, commanding the secret service squad, felt a little stiff today following his tumble into an abandoned elevator well in a storehouse during the President's inspection of Fort Andrews on Peddocks Island yesterday.

COOLIDGE GETS START.

Dick said he found black and blue marks on his legs, but that he did not think his fall had caused any injury. In order to make sure, however, he was given a thorough examination by Lieutenant Commander Boone, medical officer on the Mayflower, who found no serious effects.

"When we entered the storehouse," said 'Dick,' "the President and the commanding colonel were ahead of me. When they turned I thought they were going to retrace their steps, so stepped aside into a dark area and felt the boards give way.

"I got a good grip on one of them and saw quite a hole under me that had been boarded over. I crawled out as quickly as possible, fearing that the other boards might give way and land me at the bottom."

President Coolidge had not gone nearer than six feet to the spot. The passageway covered by the President and the other visitors led away from the trap boards on which Jervis stepped in order to make room if the President and Colonel Kilbourne retraced their steps.

The crackling of the boards and the disappearance of hisc hief bodyguard startled President Coolidge and the inspection of the storehouse stopped on the instant.

Those in the presidential party thought it careless to have the trap unguarded by a rail or some barrier.

RIFFIAN CHIEF PLANS NEW BIG DRIVE ON FEZ

Paris, July 10 (A.P.)—Undaunted by his repulse in the Taza region, Abd-el-Krim, Moroccan rebel chief appears to be turning his attention farther to the northwest with the object of directing an offensive toward Fez by way of Ain-Aicha and the lower Leben Valley.

The situation at Taza, an important town east of Fez on the Algerian Railway, nevertheless requires careful watching, as the French command believes the Riffians are likely to renew their drive there at any moment.

General Naulin, newly appointed to the supreme command of the French forces, is leaving for Morocco July 18, ten days earlier than was first arranged.

The atmosphere for the government has been cleared by the approval by the Chamber of Deputies to Premier Painleve's plan to make vigorous war on Abd-el-Krim if he refuses the peace offer to be offered through the Spaniards.

The Chamber voted an additional appropriation for the Moroccan operations of 183,000,000 francs. The Riffian leader is reported to have won over many more tribesmen to his cause.

BIG FREIGHTER SINKING, CREW OF 60 QUITS

New York, July 10 (A.P.)—The Munson Line freighter Thomas P. Beal with a $500,000 lumber cargo, is listing about thirty-five degrees in the Hudson river off lower Manhattan today, following an all night struggle to keep her from sinking after striking a reef.

The freighter, an 8,000-ton vessel, which left San Pedro, Cal., June 16, was moving slowly in the river when she scraped the reef, off Tenth street, which it was believed she had passed. Radio calls brought lighters to her assistance, after it was found two of her bunkers contained twenty-one feet of water.

At midnight water had stopped the freighter's dynamos, cutting off the lights and radio, which continued signalling for additional assistance until stilled.

Early today it seemed the steamer was sinking and her crew of sixty men was removed. Redoubled efforts of the aiding lighters' crews, however, kept her afloat.

The Beal had just reached New York from the Pacific coast, by way of the Panama Canal. Most of her cargo was loaded at Seattle and Portland, Ore., consisting largely of wood used in airplane construction. She also carried a large consignment of mahogany.

COMEDIAN HOMESICK ABROAD

"Hero" of Imogene Wilson Now Looks Back With Regret; Sick, Broke, Weary

New York, July 10 (I.N.S.)—Frank Tinney, blackface comedian, who hit London after striking Imogene Wilson, may come back soon to his wife and son, if not to Broadway.

Frank is mighty homesick over there. He has lost his money, his friends—almost everything.

And he feels that if Edna Tinney will take him back, and forgive him, and mother him as she used to do, and help him again—why, maybe he can again be what he was before he swung on Imogene's jaw.

His best friend—and he's going to find that out soon—is the wife he left for Imogene. And she's ready and willing to take him back. She said so last night in her Freeport, R. I., home.

She wants him to return to her she said. But she wants him sober.

"Frank and I are the best friends in the world," she said, "though he hasn't always realized it. Why shouldn't I take him back—my Peck's Bad Boy.

"You know, really, Frank is big. Nobody knows that better than I. It takes more than liquor to ruin a man like him. It takes himself to do that."

WORSE MEN THAN FRANK.

"There are worse men than Frank. You know, really, Frank is big. Nobody knows that better than I. It takes more than liquor to ruin a man like him. It takes himself to do that.

"And he's been punished. You don't go to hell when you die. You live and get your reward on this earth. And Frank—when he comes back and sees his son—when he realizes how terribly silly and futile his escapade with Imogene has been—when people begin to realize that Frank is himself again—"

Mrs. Tinney did not complete the sentence. She smiled—in quite the same manner in which she smiled when Frank was haled into court charged with having feloniously assaulted the beautiful one.

ANOTHER WOMAN.

Yes she had heard that Frank was paying a lot of swell attention to Aileen Stanley—who's the big noise in London now, doing a monologue with Vincent Lopez's orchestra.

Frank has told everybody in London that he wants to find a good woman and marry her—if Edna really divorces him.

He's told everyone too, how wonderful, how sweet, how good, and how classy is Miss Stanley. And Miss Stanley "keeps kidding him," the London gossips say, telling him she'll be his wife if he can stay sober for one day.

The gossips think that's too much for any woman to demand of Frank.

SHE'S A GREAT WOMAN.

"She is a great woman," Mrs. Tinney says of the London lady, "and she's doing a lot for him—and me—by kidding him into sobriety.

"I'm glad she knows him so well. She realizes perhaps, as I do, that he'll be coming home before long. I wish I could show you the cables he's sent me."

She paused—and then added as though defiantly:

"And the cables I've sent him."

It's another chapter in the queerest love story that Broadway's known in years—this chapter of Tinney's return. It's really the story of two women.

GAVE UP CAREER.

There's Edna Tinney, a first rate comedienne who gave up her career to be a wife and mother. She helped to make Frank Tinney one of Broadway's best attractions.

She saved and invested his money for him. She fed him witty lines. She gave him everything she had.

And then Frank met Imogene. Now Imogene will tell you that she was raised in a convent. She knew nothing of the great, wide, wicked world until the gentle nuns kissed her good-bye and told her to be good

Imogene was fond of telling of her life in the convent and saying:

The nuns instilled into my young girl's mind that I must love everbody. I loved them. I loved everything and everybody. And then—oh, I couldn't help loving Frank Tinney. I was in misery if I didn't see him every hour, if I didn't hear his voice, if he didn't tell me that he loved me."

HUB CATHOLICS GIVE MISSIONS $640,246

The national office of the Catholic Foreign Missions has made public the fact that the archdiocese of Boston, in the year just ended, contributed almost one-third of the total money subscribed to the foreign mission cause.

The offering of the Boston diocese was $640,246.37.

This is a net sum, representing what was actually sent from the diocese to the missions last year in memberships in the Society for the Propagation of the Faith and, under its auspices, in gifts and masses.

It does not represent all money remitted to the missions in 1924, as the diocese of Boston has a well organized branch of the Holy Childhood Association, through which the parochial children help the foreign missions.

The offering to the Holy Children Association in 1924 was $27,980.51, and in the past three years the Boston diocese has given more to that association than any other diocese in the world.

The Catholics of Boston are proud of this record made by their diocese and by their chief shepherd, Cardinal O'Connell, who is known throughout the world as "the Cardinal of the Missions."

The fire started in the barber shop on the ground floor of the three-story business block.

The firemen confined the blaze to the first floor of the structure. The loss was $500.

Worcester, July 10.—Forty male patients of Quinby Ward 1 of the Worcester State Hospital were marched out of the building in safety during a fire which was started by one of the patients smoking on the porch.

The occupants of the ward were returned to the building after hospital employes, aided by city firemen, had extinguished the blaze

HUB BEQUESTS IN WILL OF NEW YORK WOMAN

A number of residents of Greater Boston and the American Unitarian Society of Boston benefit under the will of Mrs. Ella F. Billings, ninety-nine-year-old native of Hingham, who died at her home in New York on June 4.

Mrs. Billings left an estate valued at more than $100,000.

Among the charitable bequests was one of $2,000 to the new North Unitarian Church of Hingham, Mass. The Boston Art Museum will get oil paintings and other works of art by Hammett Billings which are not otherwise disposed of in the will.

Trust funds of $10,000 each were left to Walter Billings of Twin Falls, Ida., and Mary E. Billings of West Somerville, which upon their deaths are to pass to the American Unitarian Society of Boston. Lilla F. Andrews, wife of Benjamin Andrews of Hingham, gets a trust fund of $5000, the principal of which also passes into the same association upon her death. Mary E. Billings gets in addition to the trust fund a $2,000 legacy and ten $1,000 bonds. Bequests totaling $27,000 are left in legacies of $1,000 or $2,000 to friends.

Silverware and jewelry is divided among Mary Litell, Lilla F. Andrews, and Mrs. W. E. Downing, the last two grand-nieces. All furniture not otherwise disposed of is left to Mary Littel. Several paintings of New England landscapes are left to Mary Lyttel Moorhouse Kimball of Montclair, N. J., and the residuary estate is divided between Mary Littel and Mary E. Billings.

Mrs. Billings was the widow of Henry Billings, who died in 1915 and who retired thirty years before from the firm of Larrant Company, wholesale druggists. Mrs. Billings was born in Hingham, Mass., but lived in New York for more than sixty years. She attended church every week until her death.

SUITS FOR $2,500,000 ARE PLANNED IN PICKWICK CLUB COLLAPSE

RELATIVES OF VICTIMS OF DISASTER HIRE LAWYERS

County Grand Jury in fixing responsibility for the catastrophe, before bringing suit.

While the amount of damage that will be sought will likely exceed all records in Boston courts, yet legal authorities pointed out today that apparently no one connected in any manner with the ill-fated club or the club building have funds to pay the damages that will ultimately be awarded.

Under a State law, the amount of damages for a death in such a disaster as overtook the Pickwick Club is limited to $10,000, but the law does not fix the amount that may be secured under a jury verdict where court action is taken by a sufferer or his kin.

The ruins of the death hole, into which the wreckage of the five-story club building crashed with such terrible results early last Saturday morning, virtually have been cleaned away.

FOUNDATIONS REACHED.

A final inspection of the important foundation debris that has been overturned is expected today by engineers and scientists representing the City of Boston, the district attorney's office and the owners and lessees of the collapsed building.

Much importance is attached to the ruins uncovered early today. In this wreckage were portions of the foundations of the club building. These are regarded as of evidence of unusual value in determining whether or not the disaster was caused by faulty construction of the building or from the excavation work being carried on in the plot adjoining the club building.

Members of the Grand Jury today made their final inspection of this work, before making their report on the findings of the investigation.

WATCHMAN TESTIFIES.

Matthew F. McIntosh, sixty-five, of No. 396 Fourth street, South Boston, night watchman employed by the J. L. Pultz Company, Inc., which has the contract for the new garage building adjoining the Pickwick property, stated in an interview last evening that the much discussed cement piers were placed on the old foundations a month ago. He said the first mix of concrete was put in place on May 14 and the work was completed on May 27.

McIntosh said he was sitting in his shanty on the morning of July 4 when the Pickwick building collapsed. He ran outside in time to see the roof and side wall collapse into the excavated lot.

Prior to the crash he said that he had noticed nothing about the doomed building to indicate that such a catastrophe was possible, McIntosh added that he could offer no opinion as to the cause, except that the building must have been greatly weakened as a result of the fire earlier in the year.

,Punish the Guilty,' Says the Man in the Street

Punishment must be meted out to those responsible for the fatal Pickwick Club crash, it was declared today to the Boston Evening American, by still more of the "men in the street," picked out at random and asked for opinions.

Universally the interviewed persons assert that someone must have known that danger lurked in the Beach street terrain and that, knowing, protective steps should have been taken.

Some opinions follow:

Miss Mae Donnelly, Braemore road, Medford, elevator operator: — If anyone was criminally negligent in the Pickwick catastrophe they should be punished. It was the most frightful accident that I have ever heard of. Whoever is responsible for the agony that those victims must have gone through a severe punishment should be meted out to them quickly.

William Fitzgerald, Howard street, Malden, elevator superintendent: —Someone is responsible for that Pickwick Club accident. There is satisfaction, however, in knowing that the district attorney is not lagging in his effort to fix the blame.

John Crosby, credit clerk, Congress street, Boston. It seems to me after all of the publicity that the Pickwick Club received prior to accident that someone was to blame for allowing it to remain open. Many of those trapped in that disaster were innocent victims of curiosity. Those who were responsible should be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. I believe that District Attorney O'Brien is acting wisely in an effort to fix blame for the accident.

George Kimball, Main street, Medford: It seems to me that the fire in the Greenwich Club must have had a serious effect on the entire building. If there is any thing criminal about the disaster I feel certain that justice will be meted out.

Frank Lord, stock clerk, State street: It is not for me to state anything about a criminal matter, but there is no question that someone must have been responsible for that terrible accident.

Mrs. Rose Nadell of New York city, housewife and tourist: Such a toll of life will make city officials more careful with their promiscuous O. K.'s of premises. This should be a lesson to building heads to sanction only iron cast structures.

George MacKenna, No. 36 Ward street, Roxbury, vocational training student: It is a pitiful thing to think about now in retrospection, but on general principles clubs of such a nature should be closed. For the welfare of the community at large, city officials should not issue licenses to such organizations, supposedly social. They are a menace to the public, and, as every nuisance, the city should rid itself of such pests.

Clinton McGillicuddy, No. 168 Ward street, Roxbury, chauffeur: Now that it is all over and hearts have been broken and tears have been shed, the city suddenly shows signs of interest and life. Why not an ounce of prevention in the start? Placing the blame on any one person now doesn't alter the matter. What should be done is outlining a course of action for the future to avoid such happenings.

Leo Schinhan, No. 13 Wigglesworth street, Roxbury, artist: City officials in general are to blame. They are all tied up with each other and as a group, should pledge themselves to prevent a repetition of the Pickwick Club disaster. Nothing worse could be imagined in such a city as Boston, which stands for culture and refinement throughout the country and even across the water. Night clubs and those societies which act behind secret panels should be closed up.

Patrick Hughes, No. 16 Parker Hill avenue, Roxbury: Such a catastrophe and such a pity for the relatives and friends of the ruins. They are the ones who truly suffer. Those who are dead have finished with life, but those dear and near to them who remain to be ever reminded of the tragedy should be the ones taken care of. It is for the friends and relatives that the city officials should lose no time in preventing a recurrence of such a tragedy.

SCORE HURT AS AUTO BUS IS OVERTURNED

Providence, July 10.—An auto bus, carrying seventeen girls, overturned at Allen's avenue and Henderson street after sideswiping one car and crashing head-on with another—and twenty persons were injured, three seriously.

At the Rhode Island hospital are Juliet Crofton, eighteen, of No. 39 East street; Teresa O'Donnell, twenty-five, of No. 21 Peach avenue, and Edward S. McGregor, fifty-four, of No. 97 Chester avenue.

Four others—two men and two girls—were treated at the hospital and allowed to go home, while the others, less seriously injured, went home to the attentions of their family physicians.

The bus, carrying girl employes of the Dutee W. Flint Company from the offices to a down-town terminal, was driven by Joseph Medeiros, twenty-one.

In Allen avenue, Medeiros turned left out of a line of cars. The bus struck the left rear mudguard of a machine driven by William P. Kennedy of No. 74 Farragut avenue, and going in the opposite direction.

Then the bus crashed head-on into a machine owned and operated by Edwin R. Smalley of No. 44 Concannon street, that had been following the Kennedy machine.

The Smalley car was wrecked and the bus promptly turned over, the crash of the heavy vehicle, loud as it was, failing to out-sound the screams of the girls, many of whom were thrown into the street. Smalley also was injured.

the rear end of their car, tossing them from their seats and splintering the glass in windows and windshield.

The girl will be in the hospital for several days, according to Dr. William A. Sherman, who treated her. While she and her escort were taken to the hospital in the police ambulance, Biddle was taken to police headquarters in his own car.

In loose-fitting knickers and blue sack coat, his red hair unkempt and scraggy, looking very much "as if he spent a night in the park," as court-room hangers-on phrased it, young Drexel Biddle appeared before Judge Max Levy and heard his case set down for July 17.

An additional charge of driving without a license was also continued until that date.

Biddle came here from Philadelphia to visit a society friend. Last year his family occupied a cottage on the shore, but they had not planned to spend this Summer at Newport.

The youth's mother is Mrs. Craig Biddle, the former Miss Laura Whalen, whose sister is the present Mrs. Henry Clews of Paris, formerly the first wife of Robert Goelet.

'L' EMPLOYES WILL APPEAL TO FULLER

believe, however, that the Governor has not heard to a full extent the side of the union men in the controversy over the method of arbitrating wage and other disputes between the blue uniform men and the Elevated trustees.

The trustees have already had several sessions with the Governor. The union men think it is their chance now. Accordingly, the wage conference committee of the union have arranged to call on the Governor tomorrow.

The street car employes are still confident they will win the controversy. The following statement has been issued by their wage conference board, covering their proposed visit to the gubernatorial chambers:

"As soon as we learned of the statement of Governor Fuller, we called up his office at the State House in order to secure a conference with him, because, although he had received the trustees in conference and heard their views about the present controversy, he had never heard ours. We are informed that he will not be available for a conference with us until Saturday morning, at which time we will be glad to see him and present our side of the case."

Attorney Boyden and Attorney Vahey, who have met almost daily for more than two weeks to endeavor to choose a third man—chairman of the board of arbitration—issued the following joint statement last evening, in defence of their position in failing to agree on a choice to date:

"The rumor that we have found it impossible to agree is without foundation. In view of the disagreement between the parties as to the subject matter of the arbitration, we have thought it best up to date not to attempt a serious effort to select a third arbitrator. Our daily conferences have, therefore, been merely of a preparatory character.

BOY'S BODY FOUND IN CHARLES RIVER

After an all-night search along the Charles River in the Pine Heights section of Dedham, in which the police, boy scouts and neighbors participated, the body of ten-year-old Robert Campbell of No. 36 Granfield street was found floating in the water today.

Missing since yesterday, the lad was last seen in a bathing suit headed for the river. When police found him he was still in his bathing suit. Police discredit the story that Robert was seen paddling down the river with a strange man. An autopsy will be performed. No marks of violence were found on the boy's body.

MYSTERY SHOTS HEARD IN THE BACK BAY

A mysterious apartment house shooting on the second floor of No. 31 Peterboro street, Back Bay, early today aroused the neighborhood and brought out police reserves. The shots were fired in the hallway of the building after three men had engaged in a heated argument.

One of the bullets went through a door of Suite No. 71, while the other is believed to have gone through a window.

Seven police from the Back Bay station were on the scene in a few moments after the shooting, but could find no trace of the gunmen. A suspect, arrested in the rear of the building, was released.

K. OF C. LEADERS LAUD BRANDON AT DINNER

State Deputy Receives Chest of Silver on Eve of Marriage

Edmund J. Brandon, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus, was the guest of honor at a bachelor dinner tendered to him by the district deputies of the Knights at the Boston City Club, last night. The affair was in honor of Mr. Brandon's decision to quit bachelorhood. He will be married on July 20 to Miss Anna C. McCarthy of Brighton.

During the dinner Mr. Brandon was presented with a large chest of silver, District Deputy Hugh J. McMackin making the presentation speech. District Deputy Edward D. Hassan, chairman of the committee, announced that a basket of American Beauty roses had been sent to the future Mrs. Brandon with the best wishes of the deputies assembled, to all of whom she is well known.

The dinner was presided over by William C. Prout, Supreme Director of the Knights of Columbus. Among the guests were Past State Deputies William J. Day, associate justice of the South Boston District Court; Daniel J. Gallagher, former U. S. Attorney; James F. Cavanagh, former State Senator; Louis Watson, executive secretary, K. of C.; Rev. William Devlin, S. J., president of Boston College; Rev. Frank J. Spellman, associate editor of the Boston Pilot; Daniel F. McCarthy, father of the bride-to-be; State Secretary John E. Swift of Milford; State Treasurer Thomas F. McGrath of Newburyport; State Advocate Francis P. McKeon of Worcester; State Auditor Timothy J. Collins of Holyoke, and State Warden Charles F. Bartick of Boston. The district deputies came from all parts of the State.

JUDGE MAHONEY AGAIN SCORED BY GOODWIN

Motor Registrar Renews Attack in Reply to Defense of Lawrence Jurist

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today returned to the attack upon Judge J. J. Mahoney of the Lawrence District Court.

His statement was in part a rejoinder to Judge Mahoney's defence of his own course on the bench. In greater measure, though, it was a new and spirited assault upon the jurist's competence.

"Judge Mahoney si mistaken when he says I am criticizing the courts," said Mr. Goodwin. "I am criticizing isolated judges, supporting my criticisms with specific cases.

HOW TO GET RID OF THEM.

"I think it must be apparent to the public that the same few judges appear again and again in these criticisms. It is too bad there isn't some way of getting rid of them, in justice to the others."

Mr. Goodwin said certain judges disregarded the law in imposing sentences, and ended his fresh blast against Judge Mahoney by asking "What must a judge do to warrant his impeachment?"

CITES POWELL CASE.

In his attack, he quoted what he called the history of the Powell case, as follows:

"One George A. Powell of Methuen had his license taken away on May 8, 1922, after being convicted in the Haverhill Court for operating while under the influence of liquor. According to Judge Mahoney, the remedy for drunken drivers is to keep their licenses away for five years. In this paticular case, Powell, regardless of the fact that his license was taken away, drove his car, and on April 22, 1924, killed a twelve-year-old child and then left the child lying on the street and ran away.

POWELL FINED $20.

"He was brought into the Lawrence Court charged with reckless driving, going away without stopping and giving his name after causing injury to a person, and operating after his license was revoked.

"For operating after his license was revoked, he was given ten days in the house of correction, and fined $50; for reckless driving he was held over for the Grand Jury, and for going away without stopping after causing injury to a person he was fined $20, although the law specifically says that for that offence the court must give a jailsentence.

INSPECEORS' REPORT.

"He was not charged with operating while under the influence of liquor, but here is what my inspector says about that phase of the case: 'On the witness stand Powell admitted having had a few drinks of home brew some time before the accident, and then the court stated that it was satisfied that this fact must have had some bearing on the accident, but that it could not convict him for operating while under the influence of liquor.'

"That a judge, with facts such as these before him, and knowing that an innocent child had been killed by a man who had been convicted for drunken driving and whose license had been taken away and who had no right on the street, and who, after killing the child had run away, could fine him only $20 for leaving the scene when the law specifically says that a jail sentence must be given, is beyond belief."

NOT A PILOT HURT IN 1,827,751-MILE FLIGHT

Mitchel Field, N. Y., July 10 (A.P.).—Planes from this station during the last two years have flown a distance equal to four round trips to the moon, according to a statement issued by Major W. N. Hensley, commander of the post.

From June 7, 1922, to June 30, 1925, planes have made 31,263 flights, for a total distance of 1,827,751 miles.

During this period no pilot was seriously injured in "active flying duty."

N. Y. FAMILIES SPEND $10 EXTRA ON FOURTH

New York, July 10 (A.P.).—Judging by the ebb and flow of holiday funds through the Federal Reserve Bank, each New York family spent about $10 extra in celebrating the Fourth of July. This includes railroad fares, auto supplies, food, refreshments, amusements, fireworks and all other expenditures in excess of the daily average of living costs.

The general average extra expenditure for the entire country, as gauged by the reduction in total reserves and the increase in note circulation of the combined Federal Reserve Banks during the holiday period, was slightly less than $3.50 a family.

TWO SHOWS TO AID POLICE HERO FUNDS

ander. Although the theatre is not scheduled to open until much later in the season, Charles H. Waldron will throw the doors open for one special performance.

Police officials and theatrical entertainers have offered to co-operate and a large sum will be raised, according to expectations. Plans for the performance have already been started by Mr. Waldron. He promises a bang-up show. The Boston Evening American will give further details as to date and program.

Mr. Waldron is widely known in theatrical and sporting circles and when he heard of the plight of Mrs. Alexander and her six kiddies his heart went out to them. He always has been a friend to Boston policemen, many of whom know him intimately.

Whenever a disaster of any kind occurs the first persons to offer their services for relief of dependents are members of the theatrical profession. This is true in the Pickwick Club disaster, which snuffed out the lives of 44 men and women.

When the manager of "Rose Marie" company broached the subject to members of the cast of that highly successful organization they all were eager to do their bit to swell the twin fund started by this newspaper. Through courtesy of City Park Commissioner James Shea a special stand will be erected on the mall opposite West street to accommodate the entertainers.

STAGE FOLKS AID MARTYR FUNDS

At left, Phoebe Brune, and at right, top, Desiree Ellinger, of the "Rose Marie" Company, who will appear in the twin-fund benefit on the Common, Tuesday. Below, right, Charles H. Waldron, who will give a benefit performance at his Casino.

Among the principals of the "Rose Marie" company who will appear are Desiree Ellinger, the lovely star of the show, Phebe Brune whose sensational dancing has captured Boston, Beatrice Kay, the scintillating comedienne, Houston Richards, who has hosts of Boston friends, Paul Donah, Cora Frye, Charles Meakins, William O. Skavlan, Byron Russell and Paul Porter.

All members of the dashing "Rose Marie" chorus will participate. And what beauties they are! They include: Olive Bond, Ann Ju Rika, Lilliam Lyndon, Carol Andrews, Ellen de Vany, Lillian Arnold, Dorothy M. Sipley, Irene Mayo, Beatrice Fox, Ruth Scofield, Gertrude Waldon, Betty Weber, Lovey Silver, Rose W. Gray, Sophia Ross, Ursula Murray, Laurie Green, Rita Miles, Beth Meakins, Thea Thompson, Phoebe Hughes, Peggy McCarthy, Maude Neul, Sylvia Seville, Dolores Suarez, Vlora Fay, Dorothy Forbes, Rose Miles, Winnie Dunn, Trilby Grenet.

Hyman Ginsburg of No. 37 Lorne street, Dorchester, and Samuel Kaplan of No. 63 Myrtle street, made a collection among the capmakers of Boston totaling $5.55 for the family of Inspector Alexander. They expect to raise more funds among the capmakers.

Former State Treasurer James Jackson, who has graciously accepted the invitation to serve with Walter Bucklin, president of the National Shawmut Bank, as trustee of the fund, has received a letter from Police Commissioner Herbert Wilson, assuring him that Inspector Alexander was on duty at the time he was killed.

The Boston Evening American again warns its readers to beware of persons posing as solicitors from this newspaper in connection with the fund. The American is not employing solicitors. A man who gave the impression to persons in North Cambridge that he represented this newspaper collected funds in a house-to-house canvass.

SALISBURY RUM BOATS PICKED DARK NIGHTS

Could Run in Safely in Darkness, Coast Guard Says at Trial

Rum runners who seek to land illicit cargoes on the Massachusetts coast near Salisbury need only wait until a cloudy night, if the testimony given by Coast Guardsman Elmer Nutting in the government prosecution of the so-called Salisbury rum conspiracy, is true.

Nutting on the witness stand for the defence in Federal court testified that during the time the alleged Salisbury rum-running scheme was in operation, the coast guardsmen were placed on duty each night in the watch tower at Plum Island, and were told to watch the mouth of the Merrimac River for rum carrying boats.

The guardsman, who is now attached to the Rye Beach station, testified that on a clear night the rum boats could be seen making their way into the mouth of the river, but that on cloudy nights the rum runners had little to fear.

U. S. Attorney Harold P. Williams queried Nutting as to the reason for keeping a lookout in the watch tower. The reply was that it was to watch for signal lights of vessels in distress.

"Would it surprise you to know that vessels did come to the mouth of the Merrimac and got by?"

"Not if the night was very dark," he replied.

Corroboration of Nutting's testimoney about the impossibility of seeing a boat on dark nights coming into the Merrimac from the Plum Island station was given by Harry Coggswell, a former coast guardsman.

"Did you make a statement to Agent West of the Department of Justice about the activities at the Merrimac station?" asked District Attorney Williams.

"Some statement, but I didn't know who he was."

Cricket Oil Used in Aviation Tests

Washington, July 10.—A very precious oil, suitable for aviation, since it does not congeal even at a very high altitude, can be extracted from crickets, says consular advices to the Department of Commerce from Algiers.

Recently about eighteen tons of crickets were sent to Holland from Algeria. Part of this quantity was utilized for feeding poultry, and from the remainder the oil for aviation purposes was extracted and has apparently given every satisfaction.

GOVERNOR BREWSTER VISITS MT. KATAHDIN

Houlton, Me., July 10 (A.P.).—Governor and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster viewed a part of Maine from the top of Monument Peak, Mt. Katahdin. Word to this effect was received here by the carrier pigeon, Jean, owned by Leigh P. Cleveland of Houlton, who was with the governor's party.

BROCKTON COPS GET BIG STILL BY WAITING

Watch While Plant is Built in Barn, Then Take It and Seven Men

Brockton, July 10.—When Brockton police investigated a tip and found that the biggest still in this part of the country had not been completely installed but that moonshiners were still engaged in setting up the coils and vats, they decided to wait until everything was complete.

Then, as a result of this watchful waiting by the authorities, seven men were arraigned in district court today in connection with the giant moonshine plant found in a barn at No. 15 Quincy street in an isolated part of the town.

The seven men arrested were Joseph Curtin of Brockton, Julius Verman of Quincy, Fred Cherkof of Mattapan, Andrew Mahoney of Quincy, Nathan Katlam of Dorchester, George Verman of Quincy and Chester Giarruso of Mattapan.

BOSTON COLLEGE SHARES IN FR. DOODY'S ESTATE

A large portion of the personal estate of the Rev. Michael J. Doody, pastor of St. Mary's parish, Cambridge, and all the estate left to him by the Rev. John H. Griffin, pastor of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Winthrop, are bequeathed to Boston College and other Roman Catholic institutions under the terms of his will, filed for probate.

A residuary bequest of approximately $16,000 goes to Boston College; the Annunciation Guild, of St. Mary's Parish, and the conference of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the parish are left $500 each. Julia L. and Hannah Sullivan, housekeepers at the Cambridge parish house, are bequeathed $1,000 each, and $1,000 is left to Dr. Francis J. Barnes of Cambridge, as a mark of appreciation of Dr. Barnes' friendship and many kindnesses.

GIRL, 4, TIED TO TREE THREE MONTHS

Found by Police Half Famished; Mother Wanted to Keep Her Home

Atlanta, July 10 (Universal).—Tied to a tree with a heavy rope, police found Albertine Hooker, four-year-old daughter of Mrs. Marjorie Hooker, in the back yard of the family residence, half famished and in a pitiable condition.

On the ground beside the child the police found a piece of newspaper on which were a few crumbs of coarse bread, remains of the girl's breakfast. In a glass fruit jar, exposed to the hot noonday sun, was some water. Neighbors said the child had been so treated for three months.

When arrested, Mrs. Hooker said she kept the child tied up to keep her home.

Neighbors said the girl had remained out in thunder storms, with no protection from the elements.

Mrs. Hooker, who will be tried in police court tday, said her husband deserted her several months ago.

WALL ST. HEARS MELLON HAS RESIGNED

Washington, July 10 (Universal).—While it has been confidently reported for some time that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon had determined to resign either this Fall or next Spring, when all his major tasks in the Treasury will have been completed, a new report circulated in Wall Street today that he already had resigned or would retire almost immediately could not be confirmed here.

Secretary Mellon himself is at his Summer home on Long Island. At the Treasury it was stated nothing had been heard regarding any plan of his to leave the cabinet at this time.

It was pointed out that as chairman of the World War foreign debt commission, Mr. Mellon is in the midst of highly important negotiations with three of the larger debtor powers and he would hardly resign until this work is finished.

CONSTITUTION FUND TO BE LED BY ELKS

Children's Drive for Pennies to Take Place Week of Oct. 19

Elkdom, throughout the United States, is planning a drive to aid the school children of the nation to raise $500,000 for the restoration of the frigate Constitution, now tied up at the Charlestown navy yard.

"Old Ironsides" is to be restored and the cost of the restoration is to be met by pennies collected by school children. The drive for pennies will be conducted the week of October 19 to 24.

The restoration of the old frigate will be made while she is afloat, according to Lieut. John A. Lord, naval constructor assigned to the task by Admiral De Steigeur.

An attempt to dock the ship in her present condition might result in her collapse, Lieut. Lord says.

The fate of the Richmond some years ago when her decks buckled in the drydock at Norfolk navy yard, would be the fate of "Old Ironsides" according to Lieut. Lord. He comes of a long line of Maine wooden ship builders and is the only expert the Navy Department could muster. In his opinion if the famous fighting frigate is allowed to rest on her keel in drydock where the vertical pressure would be on her badly decayed centerlines, it would cause her decks to buckle and in all probability fall to pieces.

While the ship is afloat the pressure is evenly distributed, and the work of rebuilding above the water line will proceed without mishap. After this is done, she can be drydocked and her hull rebuilt.

dent on an anti-evolution platform. If he does, the news of the day supplies his running mate. In Montgomery City, Missouri, Sheriff Farmer must hang a negro, James Crump. Sheriff Farmer objects to spending the people's money to "build a scaffold to hang a negro, when the job can be done as well from a rafter in the county's barn back of the courthouse."

THE COUNTY JUDGE insists on a new gallows. "Suppose that barn becomes haunted, what will we do with it," he asks. That county judge is the right running mate for Mr. Bryan in his anti-evolution campaign.

REV. A. BARD, Lutheran clergyman, speaking in Milwaukee, advocates taking the Statue of Liberty from New York harbor and putting up a religious statue.

He says the Liberty figure is "Pagan." We seem to be drifting from separation of church and state. Why not pull down the statue of George Washington and put up one of Joshua, who stopped the sun to win his battle? George Washington only stopped King George.

SAMUEL DAUSCHERSKEY, Russian stowaway, a prisoner on the White Star Liner Celtic, has crossed the ocean five times. Neither England nor America will let him land.

That seems strange, tragic, but Dauscherskey is like all the rest of us. Our steamship is the earth, we can't go back to wherever we came from and we can't land at wherever we are going, at least not until death supplies a passport. But get used to it, buy and sell and marry, just the same.

MADAME NEMTCHINOVA, Russian lady who dances nimbly, fell through a trap door and almost broke her legs. Now the legs are insured for $150,000.

Curiously enough, the leg insurance is off when Madame Nemtchinova is in Turkey, the Balkan States, Austria or Russia. Why should those countries be extra dangerous to a dancing lady's legs?

AN AMERICAN, Blanche Cavitt, has insured her nose for $50,000. It is not a reconstructed nose like Mr. Dempsey's, or a finely chiseled nose that makes its living in moving pictures. Blanche Cavitt uses it as a judge of perfumes. She is the best judge in the world. We live in an age of specialists.

AUSTRALIA wants to borrow $100,000,000. The money should be supplied by American finance gladly, on generous terms—not the usual Shylock basis.

Australia and New Zealand are, to the white races of the world, what early American frontiersmen were to white settlements east of them.

AUSTRALIA lives in the shadow of Asia, a thinly scattered population within easy striking distance of Japan's tens of millions and China's hundreds of millions. All of white civilization is interested in strengthening and upholding Australia and New Zealand.

THE Oil, Mining and Metallurgical Society of America tells you that oil production has passed its peak in America, consumption increasing faster than supply. Before long America will be importing oil, relying on foreign fields.

That may be. But before long, or about when it is needed, the country will find a substitute for oil and gasoline, as man found a substitute for olive oil that the Greeks used, using whale oil instead. Then was found a substitute for whale oil in kerosene. Gas replaced kerosene, electricity drove out gas.

NEVERTHELESS, if you happen to own a good oil well, don't be in a hurry to sell it. Also bear in mind that anybody who has an oil well WORTH KEEPING is not writing letters to the public trying to sell stock. Beware of the oil shark working through the mails.

MORE 'GOLD STAR' MOTHERS LOSE CASH

Shenandoah to Stage 'War' Off Narragansett Bay

A Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure, Mystery and Intrigue That Every-One Will Want to Read

Lazare puts Sally through a third degree in trying to compel her to open the lacquer case. "Will you open the case," he thundered.

SALLY MEREDITH, nervy niece of

M. FREDERICK LASALLE, war gas inventor, is intrusted with the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the formula sought by spies of rival governments. That night the red lacquer case is stolen and Lasalle mysteriously disappears. The case is so constructed that the formula is destroyed by one not in the secret.

MAJOR BILL ARMITAGE, seven years previously the sweetheart of Sally, appears in search of Lasalle. Unexpected meeting renews acquaintance, but Sally is coy and Bill blunders. At Smugglers' Leap Bill and Sally find Lasalle's fountain pen, mute evidence which adds to the fears of Bill. Sally clings to hope.

DETECTIVE WILLIAMS enters the mystery and takes up the trail of the stolen case.

ETTA SHAW, once friend of Sally, lures the girl to London. She is made a prisoner by Lazare the Goggled Terror.

Read on and enjoy this wonderful story of love and mystery.

AT last, when Sally had almost given up hope, the automatic person who had lighted the fire came in with the black japanned tray. Without a word he set it down and went out again.

Sally nearly flew across the room. The pink-rimmed cup half full of sugarless cocoa—no jug this time to refill it from. On the pink-rimmed plate a single slice of plain, dry bread.

"Pigs!" said Sally, and ate it lingeringly. It seemed to make very little difference.

When the last crumb was gone she went and looked dejectedly out of the window, and wrinkled her brow at the cabbages. Her thoughts were not exhilarating.

"Etta's a first-class, prize fool. She always was. And I don't know that a first-class prize fool, idiotically in love with a thoroughly unscrupulous man like that Lazare creature, isn't just about as dangerous as anyone can be. No use appealing to her reason—she hasn't got any: or to her heart, because it's taken up with Lazare; or to her conscience, because that's at the beck and call of the Cause. It's a very pretty kettle of fish. Lazare gives me the creeps. I wonder if Bill will really think I sent that telegram, or whether he'll guess that there's something fishy about it."

A quite horrid feeling of loneliness sprang up in Sally. Thinking of Bill was a mistake. She ought to have known better. The picture of him, big, solid, comfortable, and so dreadfully far away was being too much for her fortitude. She brushed her hand across her eyes, and turned with a start to face Lazare who was closing the door behind him. It shut, as it had opened, without noise.

Lazare advanced with a bow.

"Good morning, Miss Sally," he said. "I am come for our little talk—I hope a friendly one, and that you will not send me away as angry as that poor Etta, whom I have met and consoled. It would be better not."

She saw Lazare show his teeth in a smile, and disliked him as much as she feared him. Seen in the daylight, he was older than she had thought; thirty-five or so. The regular, aristocratic features had no relief of coloring; the skin was sallow-pale; hair, brows and lashes all of an indeterminate flaxen. The effect was almost that of a head modelled in clay. The contrast between this head, cast in a mould of so much distinction, and the ugly, plebeian hands was very noticeable. No amount of care—and very obviously much care had been lavished upon them—could redeem their coarse brutality. A little shudder ran through Sally whenever her eyes rested upon them.

Lazare watched her for a moment, and then spoke.

"Come, are you going to be reasonable?" he said.

"Not what you call reasonable, M. Lazare."

"That," said Lazare, "is a pity. Have you ever reflected, Miss Sally, how much wasted energy would be saved if people would do at the beginning what, in the end, they will certainly have to do?"

"Abstract cases don't interest me," said Sally coldly.

"Very well, we will come to the point. You are admirably direct for one of your sex, differing in that respect, if I may say so, from our dear Etta, who has a great penchant for the abstract, and desires never to arrive at the point. You will open the case?"

"No," said Sally.

"Oh, but you will. I can assure you of that. It is only a question of when."

"All right," said Sally. "And when I've opened it?"

"The rest is my affair."

"Why don't you assure me that you only want the formula in order to destroy it?"

"Because, my dear Miss Sally, you would not believe me."

"Etta believes it," said Sally—"she actually believes it." She looked

WARSHIPS WILL JOIN IN TESTS

Navy Plans Maneuvres for Big Aerial Craft During the Latter Part of Month

Washington, July 10 (A.P.).—Maneuvers to be conducted after July 15 by the dirigible Shenandoah with the battleship Texas and airship tender Patoka off the Atlantic Coast will be with a view of determining the best means of employing rigid airship in naval war operations.

"It is to be remembered," said a Navy Department statement today, "that the Shenandoah was designed as a naval airship for war purposes and the exercises are for the purpose of aiding the Navy Department in reaching a determination as to its policy in recommending future expenditures on this type of aircraft."

During the exercises the Texas and Patoka will base on Narragansett Bay and the Shenandoah at Lakehurst, N. J., when the ships are not actually operating at sea. The objects, it was stated, were in general to conduct:

"Tests of the radio and communication facilities of the Shenandoah with a view toward perfecting them.

"Tests to determine the visibility of rigid airships from surface ships and visa versa, under varying atmospheric conditions.

"Tests to determine the type and position of the defensive armament that should be carried by rigid airships in time of war.

"Tests to determine the feasibility of overseas patrol by rigid airships in time of war."

VISIT OF U. S. AND BRITISH BANKERS STIR GERMANY

Berlin, July 10.—Considerable excitement was caused today in German banking and financial circles following the unheralded and semi secret arrival of Benjamin Strong, governor of the Federal reserve bank of New York, in company with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

Their unexplained visit to Berlin was reported to be in connection with the Dawes plan, and extensive German credits in the American and British money markets.

The two important figures in British and American financial circles were met at the station by President Schacht of the Reichsbank.

EAST BOSTON SCHOOL CORNERSTONE LAID

The cornestone of the new million dollar East Boston High School building, under construction on the old reservoir lot, at White and Brooks streets, East Boston was laid yesterday afternoon.

E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel, representing Mayor Curley, made an address and with the assistance of masons put the stone in position.

Russell B. Woodward, class of 1925, acted as trumpeter during the exercises.

HIGH RENTAL KEEPS TENEMENTS VACANT

A Somerville policeman recently counted thirty-two vacant tenements on his beat. The rents ran from $50 to $60 a month and some of the tenements have been idle for a considerable time. A real estate man of that city said that high-priced tenements are not wanted. "Thirty-five dollars and perhaps forty dollars have the call," he said. "Beyond these prices people seek the apartment house where they have everything furnished without worrying."

Debate Bond Issue

New York, July 10 (AP)—Governor Al Smith and former Governor Nathan L. Miller debated last night the proposed $100,000,000 bond issue for permanent public improvements before one of the largest audiences either of them had addressed in their long opposing political careers.

Man Leaves $5,000 Trust Fund for Care of Dog

St. Louis, July 10 (A. P.).—Jacob Siler, 83, died, leaving a trust estate of $5,000 to care for his dog, Joe, as long as Joe lives.

Last January, anticipating death, Siler advertised in a newspaper for a home for his pet dog. He received almost 200 offers. After much deliberation Siler selected the homestead of W. P. Mertz, near here, which had a pond for Joe to swim in, a dog and children for Joe to play with—and a home for Siler himself.

After Joe's death and if Joe has been cared for exactly as Siler specified, Siler's estate of perhaps $5,000 is to be divided between Mertz and Otto F. Schmitt, a friend of Siler for 30 years.

WIFE, 84, MAY TAKE BACK HER 'FLIRTY' MATE

A complete reconciliation of a wife of 84 and her husband 20 years her junior, separated as a result of the alleged influences of "flappers" on the husband after the couple had lived happily together for a third of a century, is believed near in Dedham Probate Court.

The wife, Mrs. Sarah F. L. Castor, who is suing for separate maintenance, was on the verge of forgiveness as the trial progressed. The husband, Theodore H. C. Castor, of Quincy, retired book merchant, declares he is eager to take his aged wife back to his home and spend his remaining years with her.

Dislike for a relative with whom her husband associates apparently is the only thing that stands in the way of the reconciliation of the aged pair. She said she "would have been almost willing to forgive" had she not seen them together during the trial.

Friends of the couple aver that Mrs. Castor may yet be induced to make up.

Mrs. Castor had previously introduced evidence in the trial to show that her husband, who appears much younger than his sixty-four years, had carried on "affairs" with much younger women. The husband, called to the stand, admitted that the ladies "liked" him.

Today in court the husband declared he would do everything possible to have his wife return to him that they might spend the remaining days of their lives together.

"All the humiliation I have suffered as a result of this trial will be forgotten if she returns home," the husband declared.

ENGINEERS WILL NOT STRIKE WITH MINERS

Montreal, July 10 (A.P.)—There will be no sympathetic strike by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in the event of a coal miners' strike in the United States, according to W. B. Prenter of Cleveland, Grand President of the Brotherhood, who is attending the meeting of the Canadian divisions of the Brotherhood here.

Mr. Prenter said the locomotive engineers did not believe in sympathetic strikes.

BOY CAUGHT ROBBING POOR BOX IN CHURCH

After being caught in the act of stealing twenty cents from a poor box in St. Patrick's Church, Dudley street, yesterday, Vincent Stack, sixteen, of West Ninth street, South Boston, was arraigned in Roxbury Court on a charge of larceny and pleaded guilty. The court continued the matter for one week, pending investigation of the boy's circumstances.

GOLD STAR MOTHERS LOSE CASH

Red Tape Preventing Payments of Compensation in Full, Legion Official Charges

Publicity given the failure of the United States government to pay promptly and without unravelling untold lengths of red tape, the compensation claims due from the death of Lieutenant Ralph Talbot, one of the Bay State's outstanding heroes of the World War, have brought a multitude of other claims of a similar character to light.

Talbot, an East Weymouth boy, died a hero's death in France, while in the aviation service of the U. S. Marine Corp. He had already been accredited with unusual daring and bravery and a posthumous award of the Medal of Honor was made him by Congress, but the Veterans War Bureau in Washington has elected to hold up the compensation money due his mother, Mrs. Mary Talbot of No. 133 Pleasant street, Weymouth.

Following the appeal of the mother of the dead hero to the American Legion and the publication of the facts in the case, other similar cases of the apparent delinquence of the government authorities at Washington have been pouring in on the State legion authorities.

ONE OF MANY.

The Gold Star mother went into the American Legion headquarters to receive aid concerning her adjusted compensation check, when the amount of $190 which was rightfully her due, was not paid along with the sum of $116 which was forwarded to her, containing recompense for Talbot's service in the Marine Corps only, when he had served a full seven months in the naval aviation branch likewise.

Secretary "Pat" Nugent of the American Legion Headquarters at the State House, stated today that Mrs. Talbot's case was only one of the dozens which have been flooding his offices since the first July installments of the "dependents'" checks of the new Adjusted Compensation act have been issued by the government.

KILLED OCTOBER 28, 1918.

Nugent stated that carelessness at the Veterans' Bureau offices in Washington was responsible for the oversights in cases like Mrs. Talbot's. Many rightful claimants as dependents of deceased veterans are having their application blanks turned down because of a slight discrepancy in the form or because they have failed to file in both branches of the service, Mr. Nugent stated, but he also rapped the Bureau headquarters where, he said, negligence held up the checks of many needy dependents.

Ralph Talbot, who was killed in action October 28, 1918, when his plane caught fire and plunged to the ground in a fatal nosedive, enlisted first in the Navy, October 27, 1917, and was transferred to the Marine Aviation Force in May, 1918. He received a posthumous Congressional Medal of Honor for "exceptional meritorious service and extraordinary heroism" during a perilous night raid on the enemy, when attached to Squadron C, First Marine Aviation Force in France.

The deducted "dependent's" check is not the first act of carelessness which Mrs. Talbot has suffered since her son's death in France. His trunk, packed by his buddies in France, and containing his flying commission, Liberty bonds and other personal valuables has never reached Mrs. Talbot's hands.

"The fact that I have another son to put through college," said Mrs. Talbot today, "makes it quite necessary for me to receive the full amount which I had planned and figured on. I have made out the Naval Adjusted Compensation blank and sent it in, and I hope that I may see results from it very soon."

SAYS VETS BUREAU OWES HER MONEY

Mrs. Mary Talbot, gold star mother, who has complained to the State headquarters of the American Legion that the Veterans' Bureau at Washington has paid but $116 of the $190 due her for the death of her son on the western front.

CREW ROUSED ON FIRE-SWEPT STEAM YACHT

New Bedford, July 10.—Fire early today destroyed the steam yacht Thetis as she lay at anchor in Mattapoisett Harbor. Five members of the crew on board escaped in lifeboats, but lost money and clothing in the blaze.

Fire was discovered at 3 a. m. by the captain, who was awakened by flames. The crew, rushing to the deck in underclothing, found the fire sweeping the deck, and after hastily donning clothing went to shore in lifeboats.

The boat, a 127-footer, sank at 8:30 a. m., after the flames had eaten away practically all o the yacht above the water line. The captain reused to give his name or that of the owner, said to be a New Yorker.

Ensign Beckwith Jordan, commander of coast sub-base No. 18 at Woods Hole, is on his way to Mattapoisett aboard a patrol boat to investigate the fire.

SAYS U. S. ASKS RIGHT TO SEE ENGLISH BOOKS

London, July 10 (A.P.).—Under the caption "A Strange Request" the Daily Telegraph today says Great Britain has declined a proposal from the United States to appoint a customs attache here, one of whose duties would be to investigate the prices asked of American buyers by British exporters, claiming the right to inspect the books of the British firms concerned.

$40 IS AVERAGE BRICKBOTTOM CASE FINE

An average fine of $40 and ten days imprisonment was the penalty ratio to the 150 arrests in the spectacular liquor raids on the Brickbottom section of Somerville on May 9.

The Brickbottom cases virtually have been concluded, with six cases remaining over for disposition before Middlesex juries in the Fall.

More than half a hundred of the defendants were found not guilty by the court, only one defendant elected a jury triad and was acquitted and many cases were thrown out of court.

Close to $6,000 in fines was collected while a total of 55 months jail sentences were imposed.

Four women were rounded up in the raid, and placed on trial. The entire quartet were found guilty. All escaped with fines.

NEW VITO SLAYING THEORY

Hub Boxer Not Killed in Hand to Hand Fight, Medical Examiner Believes

Interest in the slaying of Johnny Vito, former North End boxer and "King of Hi-jackers," whose body, bullet riddled, was found alongside a lonely road in East Braintree, has been revived by the report of the medical examiner, Dr. C. A. Sullivan.

Frank Grazino and William Muratto, North End and Back Bay gangsters, held in connection with the slaying of the pugilist, will learn on Monday whether or not the report of the medical examiner indicates to the authorities that they were not connected with the slaying.

Vito was found, face down, in a gutter in a lonely spot along the Braintree road. There were four bullet holes in his body, and a wound upon his hand at first indicated that he had engaged in a hand to hand encounter with his assailants.

FEARED GANG FEUD.

When the body was first found, Boston and Braintree police were inclined to the belief that Vito, known to be a hi-jacker who levied on the liquor caravans passing to Boston from the North Shore, had been killed as a result of a gang feud.

An outbreak of slayings among the Boston gangsters, such as is now going on in Chicago, as an aftermath of the slaying of Dion O'Banion, gangland leader of the Windy City, was feared.

The report of Medical Examiner Sullivan, however, indicates that Vito was shot down without a struggle. There were no powder marks on the body, according to the medical examiner's report, which destroyed entirely the theory of a hand to hand struggle in which the boxer was believed to have engaged in a fight for his life.

DECISION MONDAY.

Grazino and Murrate will come before the district court at Quincy on Monday and will learn what action Judge McArnaney decided to take and on his decision will depend whether or not the case against the two men will go to the Grand Jury.

The court already has listened to considerable testimony in the case.

MALONEY PICKED TO BEAT SOLOMON TONIGHT

HONOLULU KID MEETS STASIAK

Mello Tackles Quill, Jawson Battles Smith at the Braves Field Show

By JACK CONWAY.

JIM MALONEY will receive an opportunity to win a place in the fistic sun when he tosses his tremendous punches at King Solomon, heavy weight champion of Central America, in a ten-round bout at the Suffolk A. A. show at Braves Field tonight.

Jack Conway

Solomon has won twenty-five straight bouts. Since coming to the United States he has counted with four victories, Quintin Romero Rojas and Ad Stone being numbered among his victims.

Solomon intends to keep right on winning as he realizes that this is the only way to become a champion and also a member of the Rockefeller Dough League.

Solomon has a great left hand. That's the information we get from Jack Kearns Damon Runyon and other ring experts who saw Solomon polish off Rojas and Stone. The Central America heavyweight is also fast and steps around the ring with the speed of a welterweight.

Solomon only weighs 184 pounds which gives the answer for his great speed. Sharkey, at 183 pounds, was able to outbox Maloney and Solomon figures he is just as nifty with his mitts as the Brighton heavyweight.

IT will be a case of the King depending upon his skill and speed to offset Maloney's crushing wallop.

The South Boston heavyweight will be in there tonight fighting for all he is worth. He will enter the ring heavier than he was for his mill with Sharkey which will mean he will be stronger. You can't expect a big fellow like Dynamite Jim to show at his best when down too fine.

Maloney says he will knock out Solomon and grab the latter's kingdom in the fistic world. Unlike the original King Solomon, Joe Woodman's protege is not encumbered by a flock of wives and so has been obliged to turn to the fistic racket for his fighting.

It is Maloney's plan to set a rapid pace from the sound of the bell in the first round. He will keep punching all the time in an effort to get inside of Solomon's left and put over a kayo. Maloney is a favorite.

If Maloney wins he will demand another bout with Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion. In the event Solomon grabs the glory he will be the young man to get a shot at Sharkey.

THERE is unusual interest in the semi-final of eight rounds which will feature Stanley Stasiak, Lion of Poland, and the Honolulu Kid. Stasiak has proved a riot since he invaded the heavweight boxing division. His recent two-round knockout of Rocky Stone compelled the league of managers to give him recognition. Stanley weighs 219 pounds, and is six feet three inches tall. He is a tremendous puncher and figures he can knockout any heavyweight in New England.

Honolulu Kid is a rugged, two-handed battler. He has been dodged by most of the local heavyweights who have wished to reach the top of the fistic heap by the easiest way.

Joe Jawson of Milwaukee and Ted Smith of Canton, O., will mingle in another eight-round setto. Al Mello of Lowell and Frankie Quill of Brockton will also box eight sessions. Frankie Moore of Lowell and Harry Foley of the North End will open the show with a four-round match.

WALKER-SHADE TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK

New York, July 10.—Mickey Walker and Dave Shade will battle in New York after all. This was revealed at a conference of the boxing commission.

Both Shade and Walker denied they had signed contracts for a title match in Vernon, Cal., July 21. Contracts for the proposed match were exhibited to the commission, but these contained only the signature of Jack Doyle, the Vernon promoter.

While only tentative terms were discussed, the principals agreed to every suggestion of the commission and left the conference promising to return next Tuesday to sign articles of agreement. The commission intimated it would turn these articles, after they are signed, over to a reliable promoter.

BRITISHERS TO SEE BRAVES PLAY TODAY

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY.

The Braves ought to win today. They will have no less a personage than his lordship, David Burghley, and the entire Cambridge-Oxford track team rooting for them in the grandstand. This is the way the visiting athletes, who meet Harvard and Yale's best at the Stadium tomorrow, will spend the afternoon.

Too much practice, the Britishers believe, is as bad as too little, and instead of frolicking about the Stadium lawn they will watch our Braves do battle with the Cincinnati Reds.

The game, no doubt, will be highly interesting to the visitors, many of whom have never witnessed a big league contest. Equally interesting will be the semi-maniacal shrieks of the rabid fans whose moral support to the home team may sound to the visitors like the beginning of a battle royal.

But Stevenson, one of the American members of the Cambridge-Oxford team, will be able to explain his mates that no umpires will be killed, no matter what the fans shout. And maybe he will find time to interpret some of the American baseball slang, a subject on which an Oxford man might well write a thesis for his degree.

The Harvard-Yale athletes will have a light workout at the Stadium this afternoon, just enough to keep them at top form.

Stadium Pickups

Considerable attractiveness has been added to tomorrow's meet by the announcement that in case both English and American teams finish with six first places to their credit, second places will be totalled to determine the winner.

With possible victory hinging on the second places, needless to say, there will be a battle royal for the runner-up position in every event regardless of how far the leaders may be out in front.

"Soapy" Watters, America's hope in the half-mile, was brought down from New Hampshire yesterday in time to take a light workout on the Stadium greensward under the watchful eye of Coach Farrell.

"Soapy" looks fit but Farrell is not very optimistic over his condition. Much depends on the showing of the Harvard star. He will have Douglas Lowe, captain of the visiting team and one of the greatest middle-distance runners in the world, as an opponent. If the Crimson athlete can defeat the British leader or even force him to the limit to win thereby softening him for his mile race against "Red" Haggerty, America's chances of winning will be bright.

Bouts Last Night

At Fort Banks—Lossard of Boston knocked out Jimmy Hallas of Charlestown, four rounds; Jeff Mason, Dallas, Tex., won over Jim Briggs of Chelsea, six rounds; Johnny Murphy, Charlestown, won from Don Vasquaze of Portica, two rounds, on a foul; Jimmy Madden, Roxbury, knocked out Billy Muldoon of Lynn in one round. Lossard, in a second bout, knocked out Joe Moran of East Boston in four rounds in an added attraction.

REDS AT TEPEE FOR 5-GAME SERIES

By NICK FLATLEY

The Cincinnati Reds, one of the National League disappointments, registered at the Wigwam today for a series of five games with the Braves. Single pastimes this p. m., Monday and Tuesday, with a scheduled double header tossed in tomorrow make up the invaders' program.

The Cincys are heading the second division, only a matter of five and a half games in front of the cellar Braves. By going crazy in the series, the Tribe can come very close to making the initial step up and out of the depths. Things haven't been well with the Westerners at all. They figured to be right in the race, but, after a fair start, never did create much commotion.

Our Braves stumbled in their final muss with the Cards, presented the foe with a bunch of runs, and thereby drew only an even break, after winning the opening double header. Johnny Cooney tossed well enough to win, but errors, two of them his own, spilled the mixture. A pair of John's wild chucks, with misjudged flies by Burrus and Bancroft, furnished four alien runs, which was just the margin of victory.

The natives outhit the strangers, as they have in every game. They can't seem to combine their blows to good effect on the off days. Jess Haines pitched a mighty good ball, though, and had the stuff in the few pinches that the Bannys manufactured.

The crowded collision with the Reds should find the Braves having the best of it in the matter of pitching. The Cincys have had two double headers in the past three days, and are pretty well out of ammunition. Manager Banny has Benton, Vargus, Kamp, Marquard and Ryan available for the week end ceremonies, which will leave him Barnes and Graham for the Monday and Tuesday affairs.

The Cardinals, since Hornsby took charge, whizzed from the depths into the first division. They did it with the old materials. The Braves have the same anxious ambition that beset the Cards. If it doesn't fade the club should emulate the doings of the Hornsby outfit.

Wigwam Sidelights

YOUNG HOOD has reported from the Portsmouth team, but will park on the bench for a while. Little Padgett isn't going to be easily displaced unless he slumps badly.

THE best third baseing seen in these parts in the present campaign was turned in by Bell of the Cards. Nothing could get by him.

TOMORROW'S double header with the Reds should draw a big gang to the orchard. The Braves want to escape from the cellar, and are putting everything into each game.

AN even break with the Cards would have been something to chirp about if the Braves hadn't grabbed their half all in one afternoon.

RUNYON SAYS

Does a Horse Think?
Ol' Elmer Surely Did.
He Was a Mean Horse.
"Old Poison's" Brain.
He Knew When He Won.

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1925, by International Feature Service.

COMES now a gentleman with a question that opens a wide pasture for discussion.

The gentleman is Mr. Sidney Harris of No. 152 West Forty-second street, New York, which is where the Roaring Forties begin their roar. He writes:

Damon Runyon.

"An ardent admirer of horse-flesh and a spectator at various tracks for many seasons, I have often had this thought:

"Does a horse know when it wins? I understand the animals realize they are in competition and all that, but do they know when they win?"

THEY do, and they don't.

This answer, the writer would hastily add, is his own personal opinion.

He has never yet met a horse that could clearly convey its thoughts on any subject to him, unless he excepts a large black steed he bestrode as a cavalryman, years ago.

The name of this horse was Elmer. He is long since dead, and the writer hopes and trusts he is where the bad horses go. Elmer was too ornery to live, anyway.

THE fact that Trooper Runyon survives was no fault of Elmer's. It was because Trooper Runyon OUT-THOUGHT ol' Elmer. To this day the writer looks back on the feat as his greatest mental achievement.

From the vrey hour they met, Elmer conceived a violent hatred for Trooper Runyon, and for over a year, day in and day out, Elmer applied his mind to devising ways and means of doing away with the object of his hate.

He was an accurate, powerful puncher with both hind hoofs, and for a time he tried to accomplish his fiendish purpose by taking off-hand pegs at Trooper Runyon's devoted knob, as the soldier applied himself to the Samaritan task of currying Elmer's heaving flanks. But in those days a cavalryman was an expert dodger, and this particular one also developed a masterly counter with a currycomb to Elmer's snoot.

SO Elmer had to think up something else.

He uncovered a crafty stumble when the troop was galloping in column that was calculated to ptich his rider over his head and permit the rest of the troop to obliberate his handsome features as it romped over the prostrate form.

After two stumbles just missed fire, a stout larruping with part of a fence rail convinced Elmer that the stumble wouldn't do. But it didn't stop Elmer's train of thought.

One night he broke away from the picket line and intelligently located Trooper Runyon asleep on the ground among many gallant comrades. It was a dark night, so Elmer must have done the locating by sense of smell.

TROOP C will always believe Elmer's intent was to bite off a couple of Trooper Runyon's ears, but at the first munch the noble soldier awoke and cried "scat" with such vehemence that Elmer perceived he was detected and removed himself a distance of five and a half furlongs.

THE horse doctor said Elmer died of overeating in an alfalfa field one day, but ex-Trooper Runyon will always believe his death was really due to broken heart because his rider still lived and enjoyed good health in spite of Elmer's most diabolical schemes.

Ol' Elmer may not serve as an illustration of a horse that knew when he won, yet he certainly knew when he LOST. And outside of Elmer, the writer has never seen many horses that he credited with the intelligence assigned to them by horse lovers.

HARMON-DOYLE BOUT OFF UNTIL TUESDAY

New York, July 10.—Threatening weather brought a postponement of the show scheduled at the Coney Island Stadium. This show was originally slated for Tuesday night, but the miserable weather brought a postponement to Wednesday. Matchmaker John Leon intends to stage the original card next Tuesday evening. It just means that the fighters will have one more week to prepare for their clashes.

Willie Harmon and Paul Doyle are the headliners and the outcome of this battle will have quite some bearing on the welterweight situation. Harmon is one of Walker's probable opponents, but it is necessary for him to win all his battles to get the coveted chance at the championship. Basil Galliano, who knocked out Archie Walker last week, is matched to fight Johnny Reisler in one of the other ten-round affairs.

Georgetown Gets Former Ace

Joe Murphy, who was selected as All-Scholastic tackle while captain at Medford High, two seasons ago, and who played the same position at Goddard Seminary the past Fall, will enter Georgetown University next September.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 41 Golf Champions. "One of the Most Successful Teachers," says Chick Evans.

A cure for a persistent hook is sometimes to be found by playing a more open stance with the ball played back more. Jock Hutchinson often takes the ball from a point off his right heel, but the average player will find this to be awkward. Put it about midway between the feet or just slightly back of that. Keep the club head low to the ground in the back swing and then swing the club on around behind you rather than up. Let the club take a natural swing with the arms. Many players get the club about half way back when they lift it upward instead of letting it swing on around and this practice in itself causes hooking and topping. When the ball is played back a better follow through is sometimes obtained.

TRY A MORE OPEN STANCE TO CURE A HOOK.

Help Pickwick Hero Funds

It is natural that the sport leaders and fans of New England should rally to the support of the funds for the dependents of former Police Inspector Benjamin Alexander and Patrolman Paul F. Halleran who went to their death when the ill fated Pickwick Club crashed to the ground.

There is something about people who like clean, wholesome sport which always prompts them to respond quickly to deserving charities. The writer's experience with the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket Fund has taught him that sport fans are the most generous group of men and women in the world.

Benjamin Alexander was an amateur boxer of considerable prominence before he became a member of the fire department and later distinguished himself on our police force. He always retained his interest in athletics. He was a frequent spectator at big sporting events, especially boxing matches.

Paul F. Halleran, too, took a keen interest in athletics as a young man and later when in the army and more recently as a member of the police department.

Alexander leaves six children and a wife while Halleran is survived by a wife. We are confident sport fans will do their part in seeing that none of those who have been deprived of father and husband by the Pickwick Club disaster shall ever want.

SAYS INSURANCE IS PUBLIC SERVICE

Howard A. Moulton, New Haven railroad representative, says no one can afford to be without the protection offered in the Boston Evening American's $7,500 accident policy.

PUBLICITY MAN ENDORSES INSURANCE

When a newspaper man wants information on New Haven Railroad matters he calls on Howard A. Moulton, whose official title is "special representative" and finds in him a courteous, genial and patient helper.

In his dealings with the general public, Mr. Moulton is the same pleasant personality. He has another side, however, and that is his ability quickly to see the kernel of a situation, collect the necessary facts and lay the whole matter [illegible] with [illegible] and clarity.

He strikes right to the point in his criticism of the Boston Evening American $7,500 Travel Accident Insurance policy, having himself become a policy holder. In commendation of the policy, the features of which are described on one of the pages of this paper, he says:

"The Boston Evening American is bringing [illegible] one in American [illegible] It [illegible] a person who [illegible] single with [illegible] the amount of [illegible] will be based on the [illegible] of the person involved.

GIRL WHO FLED JAIL GETS 6 MONTHS MORE

Miss Florence Donovan, 23, of Roxbury, who escaped from East Cambridge Jail in July, 1923, was sentenced yesterday in Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge, to six months in the House of Correction [illegible] charging her with the escape.

At the [illegible] she escaped she took a suit belonging to Sheriff John R. Fairbairn's wife to hide her prison uniform. She was brought back from Texas Tuesday. In Texas she had served 21 months of a two-year term for larceny.

TAX REDUCTION OF 200 MILLION IS URGED

Washington, July 10 (AP)—Reduction of Federal taxes by at least $200,000,000 was advocated by Senator Watson of Indiana, a member of the Senate finance committee. He favored a limit of 25 per cent for the combined normal and surtax of net incomes, but was not prepared to specify any surtax rates he would support at the next Congressional session.

Predicting that under existing law the national [illegible] indebtedness would be reduced [illegible] by 1935, he also declared himself opposed to granting any funding terms to debtor nations more lenient than those given Great Britain, with the possible exception of an extension of time for final settlement. Any concessions in principal or interest rates, he thought, would raise great dissatisfaction in England, and probably require negotiation of new terms with that government.

BASEBALL GLOVE GONE 20 YEARS COMES BACK

Rochester, N. H., July 10—Twenty years ago John L. Hartigan, proprietor of the Red Front Lunch, then a young man, missed his glove during a ball game. He learned where the glove went, but was unsuccessful in making the young fellow who took it give it up.

Last week a travelling man, while in the restaurant, told John he had seen his friend. "Remember me to him," said John, "and the next time you see him tell him I want my glove."

The glove arrived at the restaurant yesterday, parcel post.

JAIL BREAKER CAUGHT BY ACCIDENT

Man Found Riding "Blind Baggage" Proves to Be Fleeing Convict

St. Albans, Vt., July 10—James Mahan of Albany, N. Y., alias William Riley of Syracuse, N. Y., was arrested here yesterday by Special Agent Leach of the Central Vermont railway, when he was found riding "blind baggage" on "The Montrealer."

Little did Leach know when he took Mahan into custody that he had placed under arrest one of the most daring criminals that ever was in the State. Mahan's arrest put a stop to the first twenty-four hours of liberty he had in fifty months.

All of the Central Vermont officers had been on the lookout for a man answering Leach's description as a result of a notice received from Superintendent Walker of the State Prison in Windsor that Mahan had escaped.

Like a fine old champagne!

THE lore which enters into the making of "Canada Dry" is akin to the lore of the wine-makers of ancient France—a formula and process handed down from father to son. Only three men in all the world know the secret of the flavor of "Canada Dry."

Its sparkling paleness is like the mellow hue of a fine old champagne drawn from a musty bottle.

Once you try it—once you get to know the magic of its delicate, intriguing flavor, you will never again be satisfied with any other ginger ale. You just couldn't be!

For "Canada Dry" not only quenches thirst, but most important of all, it refreshes . . . cools! . . . invigorates!

Look for the name on the bottle cap

REGARDING IMITATIONS

He'll Be There

By LINN VOORHEES

I'M A nifty, shifty swimmin' fool,
Who never even went to school,
As I pass by the girls all eye
My sun-tanned frame and softly sigh,
And all the chatter and all the clatter
Along the shore here doesn't matter
These here dumb belles and city swells
Are just a lot o' shrieks and yells
It's when real trouble begins to bubble—
An arm, a leg, "Help, Help," they cry;
It's then—I'll have it understood
The swells get shy and I'm the guy.
Believe me, Genevieve, I'm good
I'll tell the cock-eyed world I'm good
I've never saved a person yet,
I can't recall when I've been wet
But if I'm needed—you can bet,
I'll be there, Kid—don't you forget!

BACK IN PRISON, WHY?

By DONALD LOWRIE

MILDRED after forgiving me was very sweet and I fully made up my mind to reform. But alas.

I had no job but when I was mysteriously invited to attend a special dinner to be given at the Oriental Hotel I decided to go. The purpose of the gathering was not announced, but the invitation was signed by the editor of the Sunday magazine section of the [illegible] News, and a [illegible] I was [illegible] to accept at first [illegible] Mildred urged me to do so.

When the night of the dinner arrived I was gratified to find a dozen prominent men assembled, including "Chuck" News, editor of the Dallas Dispatch; "Tom" Gooch, managing editor of the Times-Herald; my friend Dan Fisher and Dean Randolph Ray of the Episcopal Cathedral, now rector of the Little Church Around the Corner in New York.

We had a private dining room and there was much hilarity and noisy speculation as to the reason for the gathering, and whether we were doomed to hang separately or together. With Bateman as chairman it developed that the meeting had been called for the purpose of organizing a new club, to be known as "The Bonehead Club," those present to be charter members, and with a low maximum membership.

The proposed organization was to meet once each week for luncheon and no member was ever to be serious while in attendance. Everything so far as possible was to be done contrary to established custom. There were to be no dues, no constitution, no by-laws, the only rule being that members would automatically forfeit membership by failing to attend two consecutive meetings without tenable excuse.

The plan appealed to all who were present and then Bateman produced a small satchel from under the table from which he took a quart bottle of bonded whiskey, announcing that the waiter would fill our individual glasses, after which we would "demonstrate our existence" by drinking to the success of the new organization.

After the glasses had been filled we arose while Bateman made the toast, and I was about to raise my glass of whiskey to my lips along with the others when my eyes were drawn to Dean Ray, and I saw that he was raising a glass of water instead of whiskey. I set my glass down [illegible] in a glass of water in the toast. [illegible] Dean Ray was [illegible] I liked him [illegible] broad-minded and popular [illegible] mixer as well as a good [illegible] a Christian in the real sense [illegible]

In conversation with him I [illegible] that he had very [illegible] a word of [illegible] he knew who I was [illegible] my past. He knew [illegible] of persons I knew [illegible] the fact that he had the courage [illegible] what gave me the courage to do likewise.

We sat down, and Chuck News, who was alongside of me, immediately asked in an awed tone if I was "passing up that good whiskey," and when I assured him I was [illegible] reached over and appropriated [illegible] glass and drained it. To my surprise and amusement he then arose, stepped over behind Dean Ray's chair, received a nod and drank the third glass. He didn't get by undetected, however, and was made the target for much badinage, all of the whiskey glasses, some of which contained a few drops, being pushed down the table to his place.

Dean Ray and myself came in for a share of the banter, someone raising the question whether or not teetotalers could be accepted as charter members, teetotalism implying a too serious outlook on life, contrary to the avowed policy of the club.

It all passed off good-naturedly but I had nevertheless created the impression that I was an abstainer—a reputation which made subsequent [illegible]

ROMANTIC HUSBAND

A Sequel to "Ways of a Husband"

By Anne Lisle

"NO, the only thing to do is to fold the letter and put it back into my pocket. The dark may restore what the light destroyed. But that boy is sure some chemist."

"Maybe Anne remembers the note so she can tell it to Ralph," suggested Lucie.

"I members," said Rosetta proudly, stooping midway in the process of slipping Lucie's white and gold gown over her shoulders. "That letter done said: She double-crossed me. No white trash do that to me mo' than once. You was on de level and I most dun got you fo' he. But now you's safe honey. Don' you be frightened no mo,' chile. Ise powful suah I'd of loved you if I'd been wise. Basil."

Lucie's face was buried in her handkerchief and Johnny's pink cheeks were crimson as Rosetta finished her interpretation of Basil Deversey's note. But I had been transcribing it as Rosetta produdly declaimed it and I was too grateful to the untrained mind for its accurate remembering of sentences in their right order, to be amused by the odd words in which she rendered their meaning.

When Rosetta finished, round eyed and proud, she attended firmly to hooks and eyes. When she had finished, Lucie turned and threw her arms about the portly body.

"You're a treasure," she said. "A wonder. You know that big floppy blue hat you always loved? It's yours!"

Picturing Rosetta under Lucie's ingenue hat was almost too much for me. But I controlled myself, bade the faithful maid goodnight and leaving her to dispose of all the flowers save the bunch of sweetheart roses which Lucie would not [illegible] up for a moment, I went along with the giver of the posies and their [illegible] possessor.

We spent about fifteen minutes at Matt Hawley's party, even as we had planned, and then we went out a back door with Ralph and Bert to make the escape Bert had promised to arrange. When we got down to the sidewalk where Matt's car and the reliable Duke were waiting, a figure came rushing toward us from the front entry of the building from which we might have been expected to depart. It was Jim.

Forgetting the good manners which almost never fail him, Jim ignored Lucie, Johnny and Bert, and putting out a hand seized my arm in a nervous grip as he cried in a harsh and demanding voice:

"I've got to see you, Anne. And alone!"

He dragged me aside and asked in a nervous staccato:

"Any news of Brooke?"

"Not a word," I replied, cold with distaste. "You might have had your wits about you. Not only is it customary to say good evening to folks, but you might have been expected to congratulate Lucie on her success—and to say a word to Bert and Johnny."

"I didn't see them," said Jim absurdly, but evidently quite unconscious of the absurdity of his claim. "Have you no idea where Brooke is?"

"Why should I have?" I asked. "I've not been in the habit of keeping track of her. I didn't spy on her when that might have helped me to keep track of you."

Jim ignored my sally and asked with the same queer intentness that marked all his words:

"Pat isn't at Dreamwold. I can't find him either. Don't you know where Pat is?"

"Why should I?" I asked impatiently. "I'm not supposed to be keeping track of all these people, [illegible] am I? You know I have my own interests to look out for, and I'm beginning to do it, Jim."

"You're right," he said, "quite right. Well—so long."

"Wait!" I said. "You're in a queer state. I don't think you should be roaming about like this. Get into the car, and we'll drop you off at Park Manor."

"I can't. I've got to find Brooke," said he simply.

"[illegible] Jim," I said [illegible] [illegible] a force I hardly understood but knowing that the moment had come for me to take command of the situation. "You can't rush off and leave me here. You can't have all these people seeing you treat me this way. At least I can't! If you go and leave me now—you needn't come back."

"I needn't come back," Jim repeated in a queer, half-choked voice. "[illegible] get into that car with you and Lucy and the Tremaines [illegible] out home—you're through? Is that it?"

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I'm to be married on a Saturday. I'm going to wear a veil. The time for the wedding has not been definitely set yet. Is there any time of day that the groom may wear a Tuxedo? I would prefer being married at 5 or 6 o'clock. There is to be no formal affair—just a very informal family dinner. Would it be better for the groom to wear a dark blue herringbone?

MISS B. B. T.

THE rule for the correct attire for the groom is this: He wears formal day clothes (cutaway coat and dark gray striped trousers) for a wedding before 6 o'clock, and full dress for a wedding after 6 o'clock. Now if the bride wears formal clothes (a white dress and veil) then, to be consistent, the groom should wear formal clothes. That is the rule, but [illegible] circumstances alter cases, and one often has to adapt one's wishes to what one can do. If you have the wedding at 5 o'clock, and the groom does not wish to wear formal clothes, then the only thing that he should wear is the dark blue or black business suit. And this certainly looks out of place when the bride wears a veil. If you have your wedding at 6 o'clock then the groom may "substitute" a Tuxedo. This is not strictly "correct," but it would I think, look more consistent and appropriate with the bride's attire than the business suit would.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When attending a reception or tea should one leave a card for each hostess and the guest of [illegible]

2. How long does one stay when only slightly acquainted?

3. Is it correct to call at any time between hours stated?

4. If unable to attend, should your card be mailed to the hostess only, or to the hostess and her guest?

I. V.

YES, leave a card for each hostess and one for the guest of honor. In this way [illegible] each lady.

2. Between twenty minutes and a half hour.

3. Yes.

4. To both.

There is no way by which we could make Jersey Ice Cream better or more carefully than we do now. That is why so many people immediately taste the difference—why it is known as New England's standard—why Jersey Dealers have found it profitable to pay more for Jersey quality.

DAILY SHORT STORY

TINSEL

By Lenore Neely Cook

MILLY took a last look at her reflection in the mirror. She couldn't help smiling back at the fresh face that looked at her. Her figure was very good, too, she acknowledged.

It was still as slight as it had been ten years before. She hadn't forgotten how to wear clothes—pretty ones—either. Her throat was still full and the muscles of her face didn't sag.

She turned this way and that to get new angles on the new evening gown that was her latest purchase. It had been made for her. There was no doubt of it. Rose was her color too.

To Meet Reynolds

Just before she went down the steps of the boarding house to meet Reynolds, she took another look at Junior sleeping so peacefully in his little bed.

She bent swiftly and kissed the sleeping child as he lay inert. The touch awakened him. He sat up and rubbed his eyes sleepily.

"Going to leave Junie?" he said as he noticed the shimmering gown. "Don't leave Junie, Mummy," he pleaded, his arms about her neck in a tight grip.

He never wanted Milly to leave him at night. He had to be left with the housekeeper all day and he wanted his mother at night. Always he fought off the embrace of sleep because he was fearful that when he awakened, she would no longer be there. It had been that way with his father. He had never forgotten the year before when he awakened one morning unsuspiciously and never saw his father again.

A terrible trick had been played on him. And he was always afraid that it would be his adored mother next time. They had moved too, from the comfortable home where he had had so many playthings. He never saw his hobby horse or his train of cars or the little rabbit that he always took to bed at night. They had just vanished with his home and his daddy. So, whenever Milly was going out for an evening, she had to keep it from him.

Smoothed the Covers.

"Mummy will be right back, dear," she consoled. "You must be quiet and go to sleep again, and when you open your eyes, mummy will be here . . ." She was smoothing the covers about him as she spoke.

"Daddy wasn't there in the morning . ." he contended, suspiciously. "Daddy never came back . ."

A lump rose in Milly's throat. If only the child wouldn't keep harping on that one thing. He never seemed to forget, living always in the fear that everything would vanish as his daddy did.

"Mummy will sit here till you go to sleep," she assured him laying her face close to his. A pudgy hand sought her face and ran caressingly over it.

"Crying?" he asked. "You want daddy to come back, too?"

"Hush, dear and go to sleep or Mummy will have to leave." Her hand stole up and brushed away a tear.

Half an hour later, she met Reynolds waiting impatiently below. "Junior was awake and I had to get him to sleep again," she said by way of apology.

"That kid is old enough to go to sleep by himself," he muttered between his teeth. "You are making a baby of him, Milly." He laid her wrap about her shoulders as he spoke.

For some reason Milly resented the way he spoke. She didn't like to have Junior referred to as 'that kid.' She wondered if after all she was doing the right thing to snatch the child's father from him and select a substitute. There was certainly no bond between this man and Junior. From the first, Junior had frankly disliked him. Reynolds had resented the rebuff deeply—seemed to be holding it against the child.

Time to Think

As they rolled along down the boulevard, Milly had time to think about the things that had been slowly working themselves forward in her consciousness.

Now that she had a year of the frivolous gaiety that had seemed so necessary, it had assumed a different aspect. Now that she could have all the dancing she craved, did she really want it? That was the question that turned about her mind. Would she ever want what she had at hand? Probably not. When she and Philip had been together, existence had seemed so colorless.

So she had snatched Junior and fled. She had had a year of continuous dancing. But now that she had it, the taste was waning. Her enthusiasm had been cooled by satiation. Looking back now, Philip and the fireside and a book seemed heaven.

"How is the divorce coming?" asked Reynolds in her ear.

She remembered then that her bridges had been burned; that after the decree, Reynolds was waiting.

At midnight she asked to be taken home. The sight of the unnatural revelry sickened her.

Reynolds' face seemed to sneer at her across the table as he asked, "Is the pace too fast, Milly—getting old?"

Involuntarily her hand went to her throat, to that place she had been watching for tell-tale hunchiness, the first sign of age. Perhaps he had seen it. It was there, she knew. Deft massaging would erase it for an hour, an evening, but it would come back.

He Would Taunt Her

Long hours of rest and the indolence of long days, such as she had as Philip's wife, would work wonders, but life with Reynolds would be just like this—perhaps worse. He would taunt her if she preferred the fireside.

"Yes, take me home at once," she was rising, slipping into her wrap.

"Afraid that kid will wake up and cry?" he asked between his teeth. She hated him for that. Hated the sneer that seemed to be always back of his words.

They rode to her boarding house in silence. At the door, she turned to him, "Don't call me tomorrow, I shall not be here," she said shortly. Before he could answer, the door had swung shut behind her.

"Damn!" he muttered as he entered the car and drove away. Then he shrugged and smiled. It was nothing. She would be there waiting for him tomorrow all right. Of course she would. He knew women.

The next day a woman and little boy entered one of the tall buildings in the downtown district. The child swung along half-running, as children must when trying to keep pace with long strides.

"Mummy, will we see Daddy?" he was asking over and over in a high shrill voice. "Mummy, will Daddy be here?"

"Yes, dear—hush!" she said softly. Her face was very pale, but her eyes were darkened with excitement.

"Mrs. Graham," announced the boy to a man sitting behind a desk in the inner office.

The lawyer turned to a tall, thin, worried man, that sat before him. "Want to see her?" This matter might be adjusted easily, you know . . ."

But Philip had stumbled to his feet. "Not unless she should wish it—I'll be waiting in the outer office." They met on the threshold, Milly and Philip and Junior. The child gave a little cry and took his father's hand, looking in perplexity from one to the other. Now that his daddy had appeared again, why wasn't his mother glad?

"Stay with Daddy while I am in here," offered Milly.

In the outer office, Philip took the child to his knee. He bent his head to listen to what Junior was saying.

"Will you take Mummy and me with you when you go?" he was asking seriously, "Mummy said to ask you. Mummy is very tired and she wants to sit by the fire again and have you read to her. Mummy wants you to read—Mummy cries sometimes—see?" He offered a scrap of paper that had been crushed tight in his hand.

Philip Read.

Philip smoothed it and read, a smile lighting his weary face. Then he crushed the child close. He was silent then, staring straight before him. Suddenly he rose and opened the door of the inner office without ceremony.

"Will you cancel all proceedings?" he asked the man behind the desk. "I have something to say to my wife."

They stood in the doorway of the nursery, Milly and Philip, watching Junior pounce upon one familiar toy after another.

"See, the bunny without his ear!" he shrieked as he held up a tired looking animal. "Poor Bunny," he consoled. "Now don't cry, you can sleep with Junie . . ."

Milly turned to Philip, tears glistening on her lashes. "Will you read to me tonight?—That book. I don't believe we ever finished it?"

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

I AM writing this in California, where I have just ridden past a field—field, mind you—of carnations.

Once I spent a part of May among the roses of South France, where they make the attar of roses.

There, as here in California, the air was laden with the sweet odor of the flowers.

All of us have had the disgustingly opposite experience of passing through a really extensive area of atmosphere made nauseous by the defensive emanations from the American skunk.

Between these two extremes there are all sorts and degrees of odors, each one more or less characteristic of the source from which it is derived.

I mention these facts to see if we cannot get some idea of what constitutes that mysterious something that we call odor.

What is the invisible something that exhales from the object smelled to that equally mysterious apparatus by which we exercise the function of smell.

From our experience in smelling visible particles of matter we infer that all odors consist of particles of matter, seen or unseen, that are thrown off by the object smelled, much as radium throws off infinitesimal particles of its own substance.

The infinitesimal smallness of [illegible] matter can hardly [illegible] even when we think that a [illegible] invisible speck of [illegible] can permeate the atmosphere of a whole room and keep on permeating it for a considerable period of time.

We become ever more mystified when we remember that an entirely [illegible] something left by our feet in the earth [illegible] be detected, and that we may thereby be traced [illegible] the smelling apparatus [illegible].

[illegible] are many objects, [illegible] leaves [illegible] do [illegible] particles and that we therefore call odorless.

Most odorous bodies contain fatty substances, called volatile oils, which are for the most part not found in bodies that are without odor.

If we do not know the fineness to which bodies are reduced to make the something called odor we [illegible] odors as [illegible] of such bodies, are conveyed by the air and that these odors, sometimes called noxious vapors, often serve as useful danger signals as to the identity, proximity and character of many objects.

But the actual physical character of odors still remains a mystery.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

IT'S wonderful to have a lot of company in the evening [illegible] you don't miss too many of your things after they've gone.

HUNDREDS of people go visiting now-a-days in order to furnish their homes.

ABOUT eleven-thirty they take their leave and your bric-a-brac.

IF they leave earlier the chances are you haven't got anything they want.

ONE guy fell in the lake on the way home the other night, and the bronzes in his pockets pulled him to the bottom.

HE had to throw away seven candlesticks and three [illegible] before he could float to the top.

BEWARE of the guest who sits around your parlor in his overcoat.

A GUEST who wears his overcoat in the house has it on for no good reason.

TO place yourself above suspicion it's best to call on your friends in a bathing suit.

THEN they won't get nervous every time they see you put your hands in your pockets.

ONE man put a pair of scales at his front door. He weighs his guests when they come in and weighs them again when they go out.

ONE guest didn't weight as much when he left as he did when he came in, so he searched the host.

IT isn't always the host who has stuff taken. Even company can go calling and lose things.

WHEN you go visiting how do you know what's going to happen to your hat and coat?

ONE guy was so suspicious when he went calling that he wouldn't even take his hat off.

HE kept it on his head and sat in front of a mirror where he could watch it.

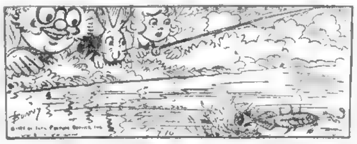
BEDTIME STORY



One of the Busiest Fathers in the World

By Foxy Grandpa.

"FOXY GRANDPA," said Bobby one morning when we arrived in the country, "there's fine fishing they say down in that river." And Bobby pointed to a river which wound its way in the valley below us.

"Good," said I. "We'll try it this afternoon."

So that afternoon we started down the [illegible] and [illegible] were in a shady seat under a big tree which hung out over the bank of the river.

I had taken along my crossword puzzle book and was prepared to work out some sticklers which had kept me guessing for some time past.

I settled myself under a tree, lit my pipe, took out my pencil and started work.

So absorbed was I in my puzzle that I did not notice Bobby for a time. Then stopping to rest for a moment I looked up and asked

"Any luck?"

Bobby to my great surprise—for we had been there quite a while—was not fishing.

"Bobby!" I exclaimed. "What on earth is the matter with you? Are you all right? Why aren't you fishing?"

Bobby turned to me—just for politeness' sake—but then quickly looked into the water again. Then he answered me, never taking his eyes from the clear water of the river.

"Foxy Grandpa," he said, "the funniest thing I ever saw is going on down there."

"What is it?" I asked.

"There's a fish that is a regular jack-in-the-box," he answered.

"A fish that's a jack-in-the-box!" I laughed, getting up to see this strange thing of which Bobby spoke so earnestly.

I lay down on my tummy and hung my head over the river bank, and soon my eyes were adjusted to the water. Then I saw what Bobby saw. No wonder he was surprised. I will tell you why.

There, down on the bottom of the river, was a round nest. It looked something like a globe. It was made of twigs and grasses and was cemented afterward, I discovered, by the owner pounding against it with his head.

And there [illegible] the [illegible].

Of course I [illegible] the nose of a [illegible] end of it was [illegible].

This happened several times. Then finally the funniest thing of all happened. Right out of the nest and under Mr. Stickleback [illegible] little sticklebacks [illegible] Then what do you think their father did. He raced right after them, grabbed them in his mouth and swam back to his home with them.

"What do you think of that?" I laughed.

"Pretty good mother," said Bobby.

"Mother nothing," said Bunny with a sneer. "Those mother sticklebacks do nothing but lay eggs. It's the old man who sits on the eggs and then even takes care of his growing children as you see him now."

"That's the father?" gasped Bobby. "I thought mothers always took care of their children."

"In nature it is usually the case," announced Bunny wisely. "But not in the stickleback family."

—By B. C. Forbes—

In the [illegible] around New York [illegible] New York [illegible]

Los Angeles business and banking leaders, familiar with the conditions in New York and in certain other big cities, are determined to prevent them from suffering a like fate. [illegible] agreed upon the growth of the city and its land and water traffic will make a proper plan prohibitive in cost, if not physically impossible by and by.

Do not make the mistake of laughing at Los Angeles and her aspirations as a tremendously important seaport.

Three years ago I went over her harbor, at San Pedro, and I went over it again the other day. The progress and expansion have been enormous. It is rated as the second port of the nation in point of tonnage. And the future is bound to bring [illegible] more [illegible]able growth in facilities and traffic. Make no mistake [illegible] coming without [illegible] of doubt.

As part of the comprehensive scheme to [illegible] transit conditions between [illegible] and the harbor a [illegible] called the Dominguez [illegible] Anaheim street has been designated [illegible] and will shortly be [illegible] construction, to fit into either a [illegible]cipal belt line or a consolidation plan. But the Santa Fe seeks admission to the harbor at a point contrary to the [illegible] desires of public officials and everybody else.

If the men who rule the destinies of this great railway system lived in Los Angeles, they would doubtless realize the importance of striving to get [illegible] with the [illegible]

Through cooperative effort by all parties including the railroads, Los Angeles would be able to fit herself, at relatively little cost, to handle her [illegible] problems effectively and economically, if action were taken now. But if anybody and everybody is permitted to act, regardless of the general interest, then Los Angeles will find herself in a hopeless heartbreaking muddle. Long Beach and Los Angeles promise to act harmoniously in creating one gigantic harbor.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS IN BOSTON ARE LARGER

Deposits in Boston savings institutions are larger than ever before. On June 30 last the 20 Boston savings banks had an aggregate of $484,040,225 on deposit, a gain of $15,317,992 or 2.93 per cent. over the amount at the end of 1924. This does not include deposits in the savings departments of national banks or trust companies. For the full year to June 30, the average gain for the whole country was, roughly, 7 per cent. Boston bettered that, with 7.70 per cent.

The average deposit in Boston savings banks on June 30 was $605, increased from $581 on December 31 and $552 on March 31, 1924.

HANAUER SEES GOOD TOBACCO OUTLOOK

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Probably everyone recalls the late Vice-President [illegible] popular remark that what America needed was a good five-cent cigar. It will be of general interest, therefore, to know that President M. Hanauer of Allen & Fisher, Inc., says such a cigar is now a possibility.

Mr. Hanauer tells me: "The future outlook in the cigar industry is encouraging. As soon as it is again possible to make a good cigar to retail at five cents, consumption should increase. The new slogan, 'Be a man, smoke a cigar,' adopted by a great many cigar manufacturers, is also showing its effect. We are hopeful for a big 1925 Fall business."

Representative Henry T. G. Dyson of Hudson, who opposes a Boston-to-Worcester bus line, says there are too many buses on the highways and that they are crowding autos off the road. Harry L. Piper, who watches over the Commonwealth's farming news up in North Wilbraham, tells me the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation is trying to find out what the farmers of the State want in the way of national legislation. A questionnaire has been sent to 3,000 representative farmers in all sections of the State asking them to answer yes or no, on fifteen different legislative matters. They are also asked to suggest any other lines of legislation which they think would be for the benefit of agriculture.

One question the farmers are being asked is regarding a revision of the tariff intended to scale down the "high rates on certain manufactured goods and to advance rates on certain agricultural products" in an effort to make a fair balance between tariffs affecting manufacturers, farmers and consumers.

GOOD SHOWING IN JUNE MADE BY B. & M.

Boston & Maine Railroad will make a good showing for June when the monthly statement is issued about July 24. This is due to a substantial gain in freight revenues. Passenger earnings, however, continue to run behind last year.

Freight revenues for the month are estimated at $4,242,000, an increase of $578,000, or about 15 per cent. over June, 1924. This also represented a gain of nearly $142,000, or 3.5 per cent. over May. June last year was the poorest month of 1924 from the standpoint of freight business, with the single exception of January.

As for several months, passenger earnings declined in June, being estimated at $1,540,000, which is $129,000 or 7.7 per cent. less than in June, 1924. The gain in freight earnings, however, much more than offset this and total operating revenues, including mail, express and incidental revenues, totaled about $6,602,000, an increase of $447,000, or 7 per cent. over the corresponding month last year.

Unless there was some extraordinary charge to operating expenses in June, most of the gain in gross should be saved for net. In May Boston & Maine earned a surplus over charges of $132,690. The increase in gross in June over May was about $297,000. If most of this was saved, June surplus after charges may have been better than $400,000. In the first five months of 1925 Boston & Maine actually earned surplus after charges of $352,269 against a deficit of $299,758 in the corresponding period of 1924, an increase of $652,027.

BOSTON WOOL RECEIPTS EXCEED THOSE IN 1924

Receipts of wool in Boston for week ended and including Wednesday, in pounds, as compiled at the Boston Grain & Flour Exchange, compared with the same week last year, are as follows:

	1925	1924
Domestic	7,443,300	6,872,900
Foreign	569,000	564,700
Totals	8,012,300	7,437,600

Shipments for the week ended and including July 2, therefore, are 6,812,300 pounds smaller than receipts for same period. Shipments since January 1, 1925, are 88,034,300 pounds smaller than receipts for the same period.

BUYING OF STEEL SEEN AS FOR INVESTMENT

Recent firmness in U. S. Steel common is considered more the result of buying for investment than for speculation. The increase in investors' holdings in the second quarter from 3,718,175 shares to 3,789,272 being regarded in Wall Street as an encouraging development. The public apparently has been buying the stock on the decline, having absorbed more than 71,000 shares in the last three months. Brokers' holdings were correspondingly reduced from 26.81 per cent. of the total to 25.45 per cent.

EXTENSION OF TIME ON ST. PAUL IS EXPECTED

Five days remain for security holders of St. Paul to deposit their stocks or bonds in accordance with terms of reorganization plan announced by bankers for the road. State Street hears time of expiration will be probably extended beyond July 15, due to many issues that have entered into controversy.

BUSINESS MEN URGED TO HELP BOOST DEVENS

An appeal to Boston business men to designate young men in their employ, give them a month's vacation with pay and permit them to become stalwart citizen-soldiers, physically fit for work in peace or war, is made today by Roland W. Boyden, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Boyden sent his appeal to nearly 600 banks and business concerns, urging upon them their duty in the citizenship-making, character-building Citizens' Military Training Camps program.

Two hundred more young men can be sent to the August training camp at Camp Devens. The period of training lasts one month and the government pays all expenses.

Mr. Boyden points out the investment the government is making in the young manhood of America and asks the business men of the community to make a similar investment in the promising young men of their own organizations.

In order to make the appeal clearer still, if necessary, Mr. Boyden informs the employers that representatives of the First Corps Area of the United States Army will gladly call upon them to explain the program and make all arrangements.

The camp begins August 1, but applications must be in by July 14.

"Will you designate one or more young men in your employ, between the ages of seventeen and twenty-four, and allow them a month's vacation with pay in order that they may attend this camp?" writes Mr. Boyden.

"Business firms in Boston and elsewhere have found that promising young men who have attended these camps have been greatly benefited and developed. They believe that these institutions are worthwhile investments in the future of your young men whom they send.

"Colonel Blanton Winship of the First Corps Area, who is in charge of enrollment for this camp, has informed us that in order to give the necessary inoculation which medical authorities require, applications must be presented before July 14. We urge you to act quickly."

BOSTON TRADE HOLDS STEADY, SAYS DUN'S

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston:

Business is steady and, while current production is a little below that of last year, outlook for Fall business is much better than at this time in 1924.

Demand for wool is steady and prices are somewhat firmer. The new lines of lightweight worsteds opened recently have been priced somewhat lower than last year's lines and have met with a substantially better reception than was the case a year ago. Other lines of men's wear are quiet.

Dress goods are more active. The production of woolen and worsted yarns has been light for some time, but conditions are improving. Knitting yarns are the most active. Bathing suit manufacturers are booked well ahead.

Favorable reports of the cotton crop have caused some hesitation in placing orders for cotton goods. Gray goods, however, have been moving fairly well. Heavy fabrics have been in good request and there is a steady demand for fabrics from the automobile tire manufacturers. Prices show a tendency to increase.

Cotton yarns are slow.

The shoe and leather exhibition this week stimulated buying in the trade and much better reports are emanating from manufacturers. Brockton particularly is receiving Fall orders in substantial volume, and some of the large factories are preparing to resume full-time operations.

Tanners are buying hides a little more freely and prices are firm. Leather is seasonably dull and prices are weak.

FOOD HINTS FOR SUMMER RAMBLES

No matter what kind of camping parties, tours, or picnics we plan to enjoy this Summer, food will be one of the most important items to be considered. Wherever we may go, and whatever we may do, we must eat and what a lot we can eat when living in the open! The food that we consume on these trips must be "substantial," too. Whoever is responsible for the food on such occasion is often inclined to feel, at the end of the Summer, that there has been no playtime. This should never be!

The camper, the tourist, and the stay-at-home picnicker each has a different problem and a different range of foods from which to choose.

Surroundings and accommodations for the camping party vary, but usually facilities for storage and preparation of food are limited. Frequently the source of supply is a village market several miles distant from which you will find it convenient to purchase meats not oftener than once per week. Taking these points into consideration, it is well to plan fresh meat for only those meals immediately following shopping days. If ice is not available, fresh meat may be kept cool in a small stream. For instance, steak may be salted, wrapped in oiled paper, and placed in a pail with sassafrass leaves. The pail must be covered tightly, a weight placed upon it and then pushed down into the bed of the stream, in a shady spot.

Camp routine is much easier if only two regular meals are served daily—breakfast and dinner at night. The noon meal may be prepared immediately after breakfast and may consist mainly of sandwiches, using left-over meat from breakfast or from last night's dinner as filling. This plan will accommodate fishers and hikers leaving camp for the day and will relieve those who will remain in camp of all responsibility for meals during the day.

It is well to keep on hand, on ice, or in an improvised cooler, a supply of cured and prepared meats. The selection may vary from time to time, but during the Summer may include bacon, ham, corned beef, bologna, dried beef, liver, sausage, minced ham, head cheese, pickled pigs feet and pickled tongue.

The following is a delicious breakfast or dinner dish for camp. If served at breakfast, extra bacon may be broiled at that time for sandwiches.

RECIPE NO. 1392

BREAKFAST BACON AND CORN.

Broil thin slices of bacon in a frying pan and then remove to the serving plate; place 2 cups of corn pulp in the bacon fat and 1 teaspoon of minced onion, stir in the fat until brown. Heap some of the corn on each serving of bacon.

Sandwiches may be made by combining small pieces of bacon with cottage cheese and placing this mixture between slices of graham bread.

The number of meats from which a tourist may make his selection is slightly limited. His base of supply is uncertain, his facilities for refrigeration are lacking, and his storage capacity is small. Therefore, he must confine himself to the purchase of fresh meats only when near a market and depend, in the main, upon canned meats. However, we need not feel sorry for the traveler. A wide variety of delicious meats may be purchased in this form. Like the camper, the wise tourist will plan to open the "mess kit" only twice daily and leftover meats from these two meals may be used for sandwiches eaten en route. Meat loaf, corned beef and tongue are only a few of the canned meats which may be used as a main dish at dinner and lend themselves admirably for sandwiches the following day.

For the stay-at-home picnicker, the food field is unlimited. With thermos jugs and elaborate picnic kits we can prepare for a picnic almost the same meat dishes that we enjoy at home. I have particularly in mind meat loaves, jellied meats and meat salads. Let me give you my recipe for meat salad:

RECIPE NO. 1393

PORK AND VEAL SALAD.

1 cup cold pork (cut in dice).
1 cup cold veal (cut in dice).
2 cups cabbage, shredded very fine.
1 teaspoon celery salt.
1 teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon paprika.

Mix the ingredients well. Add sufficient cooked salad dressing, containing whipped cream, to moisten the mixture. Serve the salad on lettuce leaves. Add color by shaking paprika over top.

Endless numbers of delicious, appetizing and filling meat sandwiches may be used. Here are a few combinations: Liver sausage with lettuce and tomato, sliced tongue, minced tongue, corned beef and lettuce, devilled ham, minced ham with pickles, ham, egg and tongue, chopped veal, minced lamb and olives, chopped cold pork, parsley and lettuce, chopped tongue with olives. Moisten all of these with mayonnaise or some other dressing.

The olive and tongue sandwiches are especially good and are prepared in the following way:

RECIPE NO. 1394

OLIVE AND TONGUE SANDWICHES.

Mince olives very fine and work into some soft butter. Spread this on a thin slice of bread. Spread minced seasoned tongue on another slice of bread and place the two together. Press gently.

Even during the hot days some of us scorn the old-time picnic and prefer to carry along the "makings" of a camp-fire dinner. The usual steak, bacon and sausages cooked on sticks, wire racks, or in frying pans are always good on buns or toast. Something different is bologna sausage with scrambled eggs. Try this on your next picnic:

RECIPE NO. 1995

BOLOGNA SAUSAGE WITH SCRAMBLED EGGS.

Fry small pieces of sausage in a little butter or bacon fat. Scramble eggs in the usual manner and combine eggs and sausage before serving.

Here is another good recipe for camp cookery:

RECIPE NO. 1396

DRIED BEEF OMELET.

Beat the yolks of 4 eggs with 4 tablespoons water until light. Add a dash of cayenne pepper and ½ cup dried beef, cut in small pieces, then fold in stiffly beaten whites. Cook slowly, place in oven or under gas until "set," fold and serve. May be garnished with whole slices of beef.

Then there is a delicious dried beef rarebit:

RECIPE NO. 1397

DRIED BEEF RAREBIT.

2 tablespoons butter.
1 cup dried beef.
¾ cup tomatoes.
¼ cup chopped cheese.

Melt butter in frying pan. Add dried beef, chipped. Crisp. Pour in pan the tomatoes. Heat thoroughly, then add the cheese. Stir until melted. Break the eggs into the mixture and stir until thick. Serve on toast or crackers.

CRYSTAL SETS

The simplest form of radio receiving set is that employing the crystal detector. The crystal set is primarily for earphone reception, although by adding an audio amplifier it may be used for loud-speaker reproduction.

Due to the face that a crystal detector depends totally upon the amount of received energy for its operation, we can see that an excellent antenna should be provided. The next requisite is to keep all circuit losses as low as possible. This means that your antenna should have no unsoldered joints and the ground connection be tightly made.

All connections within the set itself should be carefully soldered and the utmost care be given the crystal. It is frequently advisable to change the crystal for a new one. More about crystal sets tomorrow.

BEAUTIES SHOW NEW STYLES IN SHOES

Miss Therese Hickey (left), and Miss Nora Gaydon, are among the many pretty girls taking part in the Stetson shoe style revue, which is repeated twice today in the main ballroom of the Capley-Plaza Hotel.

STETSON REVUE TO BE PUT ON AGAIN TODAY

The prosaic business of selling shoes has been so lifted from the ordinary by the Stetson organization in Boston that the main ball room of the Copley Plaza hotel is utilized today for the presentation of the "Stetson Snappy Tie Style Revue," a shoe story set to music that has pleased thousands during the first four days of the week.

When the shoe and leather men of New England gathered in Boston for their annual week of "doings," the Stetson management decided to present something original. They succeeded.

Beautiful girls were engaged for a mammoth revue, special music and lyrics were prepared and a real high class revue was built around the new styles of the Stetson factories.

The revue was planned originally for Tuesday and Wednesday. The admission demands were so great that added performances were given Thursday afternoon and evening. All these presentations were in the State room of the Copley Plaza hotel.

At the added presentations the demands for admision were so great that the Stetson organization has been forced to engage the main ball room of the Copley Plaza for another day's showing of the revue.

The revue will be presented in the ball room at 3 and 8 P. M. today and the public generally is invited. The patrons of the Stetson Shops, Inc., at No. 136 Boylston street, are extended a special invitation.

The idea in the presentation of the revue is entirely novel. A snappy musical show has been written about the merits of the Stetson shoe, and the throngs that have already viewed the beauties that take part have failed to make any complaint of any eye trouble suffered from witnessing the presentation.

"L" THREATENS TO ABANDON CAR LINE

The Boston Elevated has called for a showdown on the question of establishing an automobile bus route to take the place of the present trolley route on the Kendall Square, Cambridge-Spring Hill, Somerville, line.

A letter from General Manager Dana of the Elevated has informed the city officials of Somerville that the manager has been authorized to abandon the Spring Hill line. The letter states, however, that Mr. Dana will be pleased to confer with the Somerville officials concerning the route the supplementing bus line is to take.

The matter has been referred to the committee on license, which will arrange a conference with the Elevated manager in an effort to arrange an agreement.

Baruch's Noble Gift to Aid in Making War Profitless

Bernard M. Baruch is a splendid type of the great financier who has not permitted his contact with great business affairs to impair his human impulses.

During the World War Mr. Baruch rendered invaluable service to his country as chairman of the War Industries Board, and it was his experience in this most important capacity which gave him an intimate view of war as a machine of hideous discrimination as well as an engine of organized destruction.

The most unbearable of these discriminations was that which conscripted the soldier's service but allowed all others to sell what they had to sell at prices which were most extortionate.

Mr. Baruch saw in this exhaltation of property over human life an indecent and an inhuman thing, and he said, "There ought to be not alone mobilization of man power but of things and dollars."

The unanswerable fairness, the elemental civilization of this utterance rapidly crystalized into a national sentiment which was later declared by the late President Harding.

But with that vision which has made him a leader in the world of finance, Mr. Baruch saw beyond the inhumanity of conscripting human lives and holding property sacred. He saw in this opportunity to amass great wealth out of war, one of the mainsprings of war itself. He saw that such a colossal opportunity was a standing menace to the peace of the world, and so again and again he has urged that in the event of future war every fighter, every dollar, every material energy of the land be enrolled as a volunteer for the national service.

As a man of affairs Mr. Baruch knows what innocent bystanders the people of all governments are—how the powerful few can create situations which the people at large will be utterly ignorant of, but which situations will absolutely command government.

He knows that nations are dragooned and hurrahed into wars, and that long after those wars are over those who fought them find out that they were largely deceived as to what they were about.

And now, because he knows that many wars are not patriotic things at all but just gigantic conspiracies disguised in national hysterias, he gives $250,000 to the International Relations Division of Johns Hopkins University for the purpose of investigating the causes of war.

Mr. Baruch knows that it is as idle to lament the existence of war and not try to find what causes war as it would be to lament the existence of typhoid fever and not try to find out and stamp out that which causes typhoid fever.

His noble endowment has brought the most enthusiastic praise from General Pershing, who said, speaking of Mr. Baruch's proposition to conscript all property as well as all people:

> I sincerely believe that complete preparation of this sort would be the greatest possible safeguard against jingoism at home or aggression from abroad.

Every possible plan for the elimination of war will be studied under the provisions of Mr. Baruch's endowment.

While other philanthropists have left fortunes to be devoted toward the eradication of this and that disease, Mr. Baruch's noble gift is devoted toward the elimination of the worst disease which ever cursed mankind—WAR.

Movie Education

It Has Not Started

New York's children will see by DAYLIGHT moving pictures of the animals in the big Zoo, showing in ten minutes more than a child could see in a week's walk among cages. The pictures will arouse interest in the real animals and give exact information.

Education by moving pictures has not begun.

Development of the DAYLIGHT screen, making it possible to utilize public school and Sunday school rooms, churches and buildings everywhere, is especially important.

Everybody knows how much our alphabet has done for education compared with the Chinese alphabet, in which a learned man must know by heart 5,000 or more separate designs.

Education by moving pictures will cut down the drudgery of education 95 per cent. and add 10,000 per cent. to the amount a child of twelve or twenty will really know.

It will do for learning, more than the alphabet and printing press have done for teaching.

The Folly of Size

Some notions, however fully exploded, die hard. We all admit that our cities are so big, and we all try to make our individual city bigger.

At the time when the genius of Florence was such that the world is still bright from it she had less than a hundred thousand inhabitants. James Madison, Patrick Henry, John Marshall, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington were born within thirty years, in a sparsely settled region only a hundred miles in diameter.

We carry a heavy cargo of superstition. One of the toughest, most weed-like of these superstitions is that bigness is anything to boast about.

An Air School

Daniel Guggenheim has given $500,000 to New York University for a school of aeronautics.

There is no direction in which wealth can be better employed than in increasing the country's power in the air.

Mr. Guggenheim's son, Harry F., was a naval flier during the war. No better memorial to him could be erected than to establish a school for training young men to fly in the air.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

Helen Rowland

No girl in a sane and fully conscious moment would deliberately marry a "caveman." And yet—every girl carries tucked away in her subconscious mind a picture of the primitive lover, full of "brute force," and quite capable of dragging her around by the hair, if necessary.

No girl really wants a man to be a Don Juan. And yet, somehow, she always dreams of him as having left a trail of broken hearts in his wake, and it pleases her vanity to think that when she marries him many a sweet young thing's life will be "wrecked" forever.

A girl doesn't really want a man to BE "masterful," but she loves to muse upon his "iron jaw" and to kid herself with the illusion that he COULD make her obey him, if he cared to.

She would curl right up and die if he thought she loved a "molly-coddle." But she delights to persuade herself that she can "wind a man around her little finger," that she "holds him in the hollow of her little hands," and could make him lie down and roll over and jump through hoops—and all that sort of thing.

No intelligent woman would care to be tied for life to a typical moving picture hero—and yet, every girl hugs the thought that her darling COULD be romantic and dashing and foolish and comic-operatic if the occasion arose.

No girl admires a walking clothing advertisement, but it DOES satisfy her soul to feel that the man beside her is faultlessly groomed and that his coats are always the smartest cut, his linen exquisite, and his manners charming. Oh, yes!

No girl would think of marrying a spendthrift. And yet it thrills her to see a man pay the check without glancing at it, overtip the waiter and order a limousine instead of a taxi.

Oh, no! No girl actually wants a man to BE the impossible, flawless, picturesque, brilliant twenty-one candle-power, Laura-Jean-Libbey hero of her dreams!

She merely wants a nice, amiable, intelligent Regular Fellow, who is capable of making a graceful, dramatic, thrilling GESTURE at a moment's notice.

She doesn't want a MIRACLE—she merely wants to be "kidded!"

But, alas, no girl ever GETS what she wants!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

Dim is the day as the gray clouds fly endlessly over the bending sky; cruel and keen is the north wind's blast, driving the dull clouds fleetly past. Cheerless and bleak though the scene may be, barren the marshland and dark the sea, yet in the treasure the spirit knows Summer may reign with her song and rose. Never the hint of a lifted wing, not a gleam or a glimmer of blossoming, still in its fastness the glad soul thrills, sensing the April daffodils; sensing the joy of a rain-sweet day, fields wind-swept where the daisies play; nothing to lend, in this sullen sky, reason for hope, yet the heart is high. Strange, how the seasons can vary so; Earth with its tempests when bleak winds blow, but on the road where the glad soul fares, lilting of robins and flower-sweet airs!

MANY GYROSCOPES OF LIFE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A GYROSCOPE, as everybody knows, is a revolving disc or wheel which when placed upon a ship or an aeroplane maintains it in steady posture.

There are certain things within us which are like gyroscopes.

One thing is conscience, or the sense of "ought." So long as that is functioning normally and well, it helps to steady us in times of uncertainty. When we do not know what else to do we instinctively turn to the right, and nine times out of ten we come off better.

Probably the greatest gyroscope with all of is habit. If we have done things frequently and for a long time it is very easy to continue doing them. A man often moves forward by the momentum of his habit when he lacks the proper initiative. Habit is the flywheel of society, and it is the flywheel of the individual man, that holds him on in a settled course without his resorting to reason.

There is also the gyroscope of work. If a man has something to do and does it every day, the very routine carries him forward in the right direction. Those who do not have work to do, the idle classes, as a rule are unsteady and unreliable. Work is the element that holds human society together, and it is the foundation of most of our morality.

Another gyroscope is public opinion. We go on doing the same thing and pursuing a course simply because people expect it of us.

Another gyroscope which may be mentioned is love. Very frequently a crisis happens in the family and is only tided over because of the affection of the members. Love is one of those things that hold on when intelligence is baffled.

The family is a gyroscope, and there are many men who go on working hard simply because of those around them. Their desire to protect their family and their position as the bread-winner drive them forward upon their course.

Very often a wife is a good gyroscope. She will keep a man at work and busy when he loses interest in it otherwise. She is a constant, steady force, impelling him to industry and decency.

Very often when one's career is threatened by the waves and winds of opposition and circumstances, he needs to fall back upon a gyroscope of some kind to keep him steady in his course. Through darkness and disillusionment and failure a man pursues the even tenor of his way because some gyroscope is revolving within him.

LIGHT IS REFLECTED FROM CLOUDS

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

Clouds are not only useful for giving rain, snow, shade, and protection from cold on chilly nights, and for gratifying the love of beauty by their colors, their shapes, and their shadows, but in certain circumstances they are illuminators, capable of brightening the landscape and turning a gloomy day into a cheerful one.

This power they owe to their high degree of reflectivity for light. There is hardly anything in nature whiter than a sun-illumined cloud.

When the skies of the earth are usually cloudy on the sunward side, at the time when the new moon shows its slender crescent soon after sunset, the light poured out into space from the upper surface of the sunlit clouds extends across the gap of nearly a quarter of a million miles from the earth to the moon, in such abundance that it floods the side of the moon not reached by the sun and makes it plainly visible to us like one of our own landscapes lying in bright moonlight.

This beautiful phenomenon is well called "the old moon in the new moon's arms." It shows what clouds can do in the way of reflecting and distributing light, for if new moon occurs at a time when the sunward side of the earth is arched by almost totally clear skies, the dark side of the moon remains hidden from us, through lack of light reflected from the earth's clouds to make it visible.

But the light of clouds—which of course, is never original, but always reflected light—plays a great part often, on the earth itself.

Scientific observation has shown that when the sky is filled with clouds on the side opposite to the sun they may reflect enough light to make the total radiation falling upon that part of the earth which is reached at the same time by direct sunlight from one direction and by cloud-light from the other, greater than it would be if the sky were entirely cloudless.

This means that if the clouds were away the light which they send back to the earth would be dissipated in open space.

I said that the light of clouds is wholly reflected, but the statement should perhaps be qualified to a certain extent, because "luminous," or "self-shining," night clouds have been reported by some observers.

The warming effects of clouds, due to their power to intercept the radiation of heat from the ground at night, is very much greater than most persons suppose. One of the results of this arrest of terrestrial radiation is prevention of the formation of dew.

But even in the absence of clouds the atmosphere exerts a wonderful influence over the sunlight. It is estimated that even when the sun is shining directly down from the zenith, as it may do at places situated between the tropics, nearly one-quarter (22 per cent) of its radiation is arrested during its course through the atmosphere.

But this is a minimum, for ordinarily, when the sun is high in the sky, not less than half its radiation is lost before reaching the ground. And, near the horizon, where the rays have to pass through a far greater thickness of air, the loss is largely increased.

Yet, as in the case of the clouds, the loss is not entire, for the air scatters much of the light arrested by it and thus contributes to the general illumination.

It is the radiation near the red end of the spectrum which is the least affected by atmospheric absorption and scattering, while that at the blue end is very largely scattered, producing the appearance of a blue dome over-arching the earth at a great, but indefinite height.

The whitish look of the sky around the sun and near the horizon is due to the presence of dust particles.

As the Bulletin of the American Meteorological Society explains it, "when one looks toward the sun he sees much white light, which has been reflected by the dust particles near the line of sight, added to the blue, so that it becomes whitish and pale."

ONCE-OVERS

WHY A MAN AND HIS WIFE SHOULD TAKE THEIR VACATIONS AT DIFFERENT TIMES AND PLACES

In planning your vacation this year it might be a good idea for you and your help-mate to decide upon different plans and places.

Particularly is this true if you cannot agree in your ideas.

Vacation is not worth while if the person who takes it is not satisfied with the manner in which it is spent.

Coming home from a vacation which was neither pleasing nor interesting you feel that time was wasted.

Those who can have but two weeks in a year should have the privilege of doing what they desire.

If there are certain distasteful things which one must feel in duty bound to do in the short two weeks, it is regrettable.

For fifty weeks of the year a man or a woman perhaps must do the things that employer or family desire.

Vacation time should mean a respite from demands which oppress bodily or mentally.

Plan your vacation so that each member of the family may get the most enjoyment out of it. That is the reason for a vacation.
